Victorious Pastor and His Wife

REV. EDWIN CURTIS AND MRS. CURTIS
The pastor today won his fight to remain in the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church, Brookline, under a decision handed down in the State Supreme Court.

PASTOR CURTIS VICTOR

Brookline Clergyman Wins His Legal Battle to Retain Presbyterian Pulpit

The fight in the First Presbyterian Church of Brookline over whether the Rev. Edwin Curtis could remain as pastor was decided by the Full Bench of the Supreme Court today in favor of the pastor and his supporters.

This is the case in which the pastor was alleged to have blessed some french fried potatoes and to have baptized a dog, allegations which he later denied.

The court ruled that the majority controls the affairs of the church. It dismissed the bill in equity brought by a minority of the church society to prevent the Rev. Mr. Curtis from preaching in the church.

FINDS OR PASTOR CURTIS.

The basis of the petition was that the pastor had not been approved by the Boston Presbytery in accordance with the ecclesiastical policy of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America.

The court said, in an opinion written by Chief Justice Rugg, that the majority controls the affairs of the society and that Pastor Curtis was legally elected minister of that church. The opinion continues:

"There is no controversy between

25 Drown as Old Bridge Gives Way

Kelso, Wash., Jan. 4 (By International News Service). — Searching parties, working the first time in daylight today were dragging the muddy, turbulent Cowlitz River for an unknown number of victims drowned when an old suspension bridge collapsed last night.

More than twenty-five are believed to have died. The sudden crash carried between fifty and 100 pedestrains, a truck and ten automobiles into the water.

Swollen waters of the Cowlitz, flowing into the Columbia River two miles below Kelso may swirl the bodies many miles before they are recovered.

RESCUE CHILDREN AT PORTLAND FIRE

Portland, Jan. 4.—Five children of Mrs. D. C. Train were rescued today from their home at No. 271 Oxford street when a fire swept through the building. The children were alone when occupants of another part of the house discovered the blaze. It was with difficulty that firemen made their way through the dense smoke. The building was badly damaged by fire. A blinding storm and deep drifts handicapped the firemen.

U. S. REFUSED TO CANCEL DEBT

Washington, Jan. 4. — Montague Norman, governor of the Bank of England, who visited the United States incognito last Spring, formally proposed debt cancellation to high officials of the administration, but his plan was firmly rejected, it was officially established today.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon informed Norman that cancellation of the British debt to this country was out of the question and bore no relations whatever to settlement of reparations.

W. P. G. HARDING'S NAME ELIMINATED

Washington, Jan. 4.—The name of W. P. G. Harding has been eliminated from those now under consideration for appointment to the governorship of the Federal Reserve Board, it was said today by a high official of the Treasury. It was said that Mr. Harding, a former board governor, would enter private business.

MORE 'WAR GRAFT' INDICTMENTS NEAR

Washington, Jan. 4.—The Department of Justice is ready to press for more indictments in graft investigation. Attorney-General Daugherty will urge impanelling of a special grand jury to consider additional cases in which evidence is said to be complete.

Following indictment of Benedict Crowell, former Assistant Secretary of War, and others, it is said the Department of Justice next will go more deeply into purchases of different kinds of war materials.

ALL TURK TROOPS CALLED TO COLORS

London, Jan. 4.—The Turkish government has issued a decree calling to the colors all able bodied men in the liberated regions, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Constantinople.

HEIRESS TO RICHES ONLY IN HER MIND

Paris, Jan. 4.—Mme. Juanita Leotardi, beautiful Corsican, who testified in litigation that she was sole heiress to $100,000,000 bequeathed to her by Mrs. Lillian Fair Heller, of Boston, was wealthy only in her own imagination, physicians testified today. They swore that the use of cocaine had led Mme. Leotardi to believe herself fabulously rich.

The woman was sued by a French banker who advanced sums of money to her.

ANOTHER CHURCH IN CANADA BURNS

Quebec, Jan. 4.—The twelfth fire to sweep a Catholic institution in Canada within a few months was reported today. It razed the Good Shepherd Convent of St. George De Beauce, about thirty miles from this city, shortly after midnight.

The fire started under the roof and spread rapidly.

One hundred children in the building escaped.

The loss was estimated at $100,000.

ULTIMATUM TO BRITAIN BY FRANCE

Paris, Jan. 4 (By the Associated Press).—At today's session of the Premiers' Conference, Premier Poincare of France read a virtual ultimatum to the British to say yes or no to the French reparations proposition or else discontinue the conference, according to a British delegate.

The British delegation members declared they were astounded by the tone adopted by M. Poincare. The French premier spoke in a sharp manner as he delivered his statement, they said.

MORGAN PARTNER'S DAUGHTER KILLED

Paris, Jan. 4 (By Associated Press). —Miss Hope Harjes, twenty-four-year-old daughter of H. H. Harjes, of Morgan, Harjes & Co., the Paris branch of J. P. Morgan & Co., was killed in a hunting accident at the Harjes country place. Miss Harjes was riding a polo pony, which became frightened. She was thrown, and in falling her head struck the stump of a tree.

DEATH IS STORM'S TOLL

Wires Down, Ships Driven Ashore and Rail and Trolley Service Tie Up

Death from exposure, destruction of shipping, heavy damage to telegraph and telephone systems, crippling of railroad and street railway services and untold inconvenience to the public were reported today from the blizzard.

More snow is on the way. The local forecast today called for fair weather tonight. But it added that an east-bound snow storm from the west was due to hit Boston sometime tomorrow.

James Eubart of No. 11 Thomas street, East Dedham, was found unconscious in a doorway at No. 5205 Washington street, West Roxbury. He was dead when brought to City Hospital, a victim of exposure.

Michael Norton of No. 3 Church court, Woburn, was clearing snow from Boston & Maine tracks in Woburn when he was hurled twenty feet by the engine of an inbound train which he failed to hear. He is in serious condition in Choate Memorial Hospital.

CREW ESCAPES.

The four-masted Boston schooner, Alice M. Colburn, from Portland, Me., for Hampton Roads, dragged anchors and went ashore on Egg Rock, off Gloucester. Captain E. A. Lunt and ten men escaped to the mainland in an open boat after a stiff three-mile row.

Two Ipswich fishermen, believed to have been lost in Ipswich Bay, finally came into Rockport, having been blown across the bay in a twenty-five-foot open boat.

Boston took eight inches of snow. But outside points reported more snow, especially with this storm added to the last one.

Marlboro reported eighteen inches of snow on a level. Woonsocket had continuous storm for seventeen hours, a twenty-year record for continuous fall. It left thirteen inches of snow.

SCHOOLS CLOSED.

"No school was the general rule. Even Boston and the cities of the metropolitan district, yielded to the snow and the impossibility of ad-

Shoe Official Has Disappeared

Brockton, Jan. 4.—Thomas Schofield deposited $60,000 in checks and cash in a Boston bank, returned to his firm and was elected treasurer, went home and then drove away in his automobile. That was Tuesday.

Today the police sent descriptions broadcast and searched Island Pond, Abington, where his deserted car was found late yesterday with lights burning.

The case is one of the most mysterious that has faced the Brockton police in years.

His cash accounts are correct and his home life was supposed to be ideal. Both he and his wife are popular. Neither police nor close associates can ascribe any reason for voluntary disappearance.

Thomas Schofield, pillar of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, leader in the Y. M. C. A. and Masonic circles, went to Boston Tuesday with his deposits, apparently happy.

On his return the directors of the Stacy-Adams Shoe Manufacturing Company elevated him from assistant treasurer to treasurer.

Schofield telephoned his wife of

Text of Governor Cox's Inaugural Speech

Governor Channing Cox in his inaugural address to the Legislature today advocated several progressive measures. He said in part:

Members of the General Court:—

The Legislature of Massachusetts is in session longer than that of any other State in the Union. Most States have only biennial legislative sessions, and the length of those sessions is definitely limited by their Constitutions.

With the present rules of procedure in the General Court, which in their protection of the rights of a minority are admirable, it has seemed impossible to shorten materially the legislative session. There are few matters presented in one year which, after fair consideration and rejection, could not, without public injury, await the deliberation of another General Court. There is already evidence that the people propose to invoke the referendum upon matters of widespread general interest, which will in any event postpone consideration of such matters for two years.

Therefore I recommend that pro-

Governor Also Urges Old-Age Pension in Inaugural Address Made Today

Denouncing in harsh terms the most offensive types of coal robbers, those who charge outrageous prices and those who sell bone and slate to an unsuspecting public, Governor Cox today, in his inaugural address, demanded that the Legislature at once pass some drastic laws that will put the coal profiteers behind the bars.

He demanded a $5,000,000 gasoline tax, to be collected at the rate of 2 cents a gallon, and to be used exclusively to build new highways.

He condemned the Charlestown State Prison and demanded its abolition.

He urged a war memorial building, to cost at least $1,000,000, to be built on Beacon street, west of the State House, to house the war relics, a great assembly hall and the Supreme Court and State Library.

He declared for old age pensions and asked that an experimental system, to which private citizens may contribute, be started at once.

He declared for the retention of

MISSING SEAMEN BLOWN TO SAFETY

Ipswich, Jan. 4.—Suffering from exposure and exhausted from hailing continuously for the greater part of eighteen hours, two fishermen were blown to safety on the shore here today. They were driven across Ipswich Bay from Rockport.

The men are Edward Upham of No. 19 Clark street, Rockport, and Emmanuel Silva, his neighbor. They had started in a 25-foot boat to trawl from Rockport to near Halibut Point.

13 INCHES OF SNOW IN RHODE ISLAND

Woonsocket, Jan. 4. — "Little Rhody" has plenty of snow. Thirteen inches of it accumulated here during a steady fall for seventeen hours.

COURT STENOGRAPHER BEFORE ALLEN JURY

The appearance today before Attorney-General Allen's special grand jury probing the Pelletier-Crabtree charges, of Philip Burt, official stenographer, indicated that the confession of former District Attorney William J. Corcoran of Middlesex County had been presented before the grand jurors. Burt is said to have been the stenographer employed to take Corcoran's statement at the home of Warren Kane at 795 Parker street, Roxbury, in the presence of Special Attorney General William Flaherty.

SEARCH CHESAPEAKE BAY FOR MISSING PLANE

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 4—Four submarine chasers attached to the Naval Academy today searched Chesapeake Bay for a seaplane which put out yesterday from the army proving station at Aberdeen, Md., for Hampton Roads, Va., and failed to reach its destination.

1 DEATH REPORTED AND ALL NEW ENGLAND HARD HIT BY STORM

TRAINS AND WIRES CRIPPLED, SHIPS IMPERILLED BY GALE

dren getting to and from school-houses.

Steam and trolley transportation was crippled. Local trains were late and through trains indefinitely so.

The Boston Elevated Railway Company kept its lines open by a hard fight. But the country trolley lines, while keeping some town tracks open, were badly hit in the open districts, where drifts piled high.

WIRES ARE DOWN.

Many wires were brought down, especially on Cape Cod. Western Union Telegraph Service to Taunton and New Bedford districts was cut off.

Snowshoes were used in outlying districts. Winter sport with this footgear was turned to good account. Salem girls went to work on snowshoes. Lexington used them where ordinary transportation failed.

Reports of snow depth varied. Boston had a seven-inch fall over night. Marlboro reported eighteen inches of snow on a level, accumulated from this storm and the one before.

A snow plow and crew of the Eastern Massachusetts Railway Company, which started to clear trolley track along Highland avenue to Lynn, were "lost" for three hours. An automobile search party had to turn back. The plow and crew finally came back.

A train backing out from the South Station collided with an incoming late train from Campello. One of the vestibules on a Pullman car of the train backing out was crushed in.

The most thrilling sea story of the blizzard was the escape of Captain Everard A. Lunt and crew of ten men of the four-masted schooner Alice M. Colburn in a three-mile row to shore in an open boat after their tried to walk home but collapsed.

The schooner ran on Egg Rock in the gale. A boat was launched with much trouble. A stiff pull to shore landed the skipper and his ten seamen between Gloucester and Manchester-by-the-Sea.

Once on the mainland the refugees stumbled through the snow to the residence of M. D. Ericson, where they received shelter for the night, food and cash. They suffered some from exposure.

Captain Lunt telephoned Gloucester coast guard station and through a misunderstanding it was thought by the coast guard men that only the skipper and one of the crew came ashore and that the rest of the crew were aboard.

ALL NIGHT SEARCH.

Captain Lunt was unable to tell just where the schooner had gone ashore so the life-savers had a blind all-night search for the vessel, which was supposed to have hit somewhere along the mainland.

Captain Harry King of the coast guard crew and Captain Lunt planned to row out to Egg Rock today and investigate the schooner's condition.

Captain Lunt believes that, while the schooner is in bad position, it can be hauled off without serious damage. The coast guard cutter Tampa was ordered from Boston to the assistance of the vessel.

James Hobart, 40 years, of No. 11 Thomas street, East Dedham, perished in the storm. He was found unconscious in a doorway at No. 2205 Washington street, West Roxbury. He was dead when brought to City Hospital. It is thought he tried to walk home but collapsed.

CRASH IN STATION.

Blinded by snow, New Haven brakemen failed to see the lights of an incoming train and as result the rear car of a string of empties backed into an empty passenger coach a short distance outside South Station today.

Arriving one hour late from Campello, with three "deadheads" in front the train was turning from the main track to a spur leading into the station when the third coach was struck by the parlor car Willimantic, the last of ten being switched off Track 15.

The vestibule of the parlor car was stove in at one corner. The day coach was scraped. No one was hurt. The accident tied up all traffic on Track 15 for hours.

More snow is due. The local forecast called for fair weather tonight in Boston. But a western storm is moving east and is expected here some time tomorrow.

TIES UP SHIPPING.

A telegram from Highland Light on the Cape reported a fifty-mile blizzard raging at 8 a. m., with no signs of abatement.

Graves Light at the outer entrance to Boston harbor was cut off from its usual telephone communication.

Heavy seas raged in Massachusetts Bay all night and today. Shipping was tied up, with no vessels entering or leaving the port of Boston the earlier parts of the day.

Revere trolley service was demoralized but a jitney line operated in spite of the drifts.

The Boston & Maine reported all local trains from fifteen to twenty minutes late and through trains from one and one-half hours to four hours late.

USE SNOWSHOES.

Concord, N. H., and Central Vermont divisions were badly hit, trains running from one to two hours behind schedule.

Lexington folk went to work on snowshoes. All lines of transportation into the town were badly crippled. A B. & M. train bound for Concord was stalled just outside of Bedford and had to be sent back. The Concord, Maynard & Hudson Railway lines gave up the ghost last night and have run no cars since.

Trains out of Salem proceeded with great difficulty, and the 7:40 A. M. out of Danvers was stalled almost an hour in the deep snow drift that filled "The Cut" near the High Bridge.

All street car lines in Salem were seriously hampered by the storm, but the Wenham line was the only one not opened this morning. Trucks delayed the cars even further. Middleton cars were held up more than an hour when a heavy truck overturned in the track.

WIRES DOWN.

Early reports came in of wires being down. The first two instances reported were at Ashland street and Hyde Park avenue, Roslindale, and D and Bolton streets, South Boston.

The Western Union Telegraph Co. reported all wires "dead" on the Taunton-New Bedford Railroad division.

The Cape Cod section of the telegraph service was particularly hard hit. Wires and poles were reported down. A crew of forty repair men was hustled out on a work train down the Cape division to repair the storm damage.

Electric lighting service in Roxbury was crippled for some time. The damage was repaired by emergency crews of the Edison Company. Other suburban points were slightly affected, but little trouble being reported. The Maplewood section of Malden was without light during the night.

TROLLEYS SNARLED UP.

While the Boston Elevated, with its superior facilities was able to keep its tracks open, outside trolley transportation was badly snarled.

The Elevated offices called it "a stupendous task," but declared every line was kept open, with but slight delays in car schedules. Most delays were caused, it was said, by automobiles or horse-drawn vehicles becoming stalled on car tracks.

The Elevated was well prepared from the last storm and had an early start against this when snow began to fall in early afternoon.

One hundred and thirty-three snow plows, 418 men and many teams were buried by the Elevated against the snow enemy.

USE SNOWSHOES.

The lines of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company north and south of Boston had a tough fight all over their extended territory.

Salem girls living in the outlying districts, where trolley lines were blocked, traveled on snowshoes until they struck easier going in the city.

An Eastern Massachusetts snowplow and crew were lost for three hours "somewhere" along the snow-buried Highland avenue line running from Salem to Lynn.

The plow and men started from Town House square, Salem, at one o'clock in the morning. When it had not returned two hours later and had not sent back word, a searching party set out in an automobile. The automobile ran into deeper drifts than it could negotiate and was forced to put back.

FLOW SHOWS UP.

At 4 o'clock the missing plow rolled back to Town House square. It had been over the line twice, bucking gigantic drifts along the three-mile stretch of road.

In spite of the plowing the line became tied up again in a short time.

The Salem-Wenham section of the Salem trolley service was snowblocked; also the Danvers line.

The "paper" car, due from Boston at 5 o'clock with the morning newspapers, did not arrive at Salem until 7:30.

Two electric-power street sweepers operated by the Eastern Massachusetts, went out of commission at 2 a. m. and were taken back to the barn.

Army of 1,700 Men Mobilized by City to Battle Snow

How the city is removing the snow from the streets:

One thousand seven hundred men.

Three hundred and fifty teams, single and double.

Fifty auto trucks.

Twenty-four tractor plows.

Fighting force is centralized in front of the big terminal stations, downtown streets and Back Bay districts. Suburban districts are under contract removal. Several hundred war veterans were given employment.

his promotion as quickly as possible after his election and said he would be home for supper.

Leaving the office at his accustomed time he went direct to his home, No. 228 Spring street, got his machine and drove away.

Where did he go?

Children playing around Memorial Bridge, Island Pond, Abington, found the car, lights aglare. Peers inside gave Schofield's name and address. They informed Chief of Police John Bates of Abington, who notified Marshal Donald Guerin of this city.

The surface of the pond, at least nearby the bridge, was examined today. No trace was found of Schofield.

John McElaney of the firm told the police that Schofield's accounts were correct.

The missing man is five feet, eight inches in height weighed about 160 pounds and, at the time of his disappearance, wore a dark gray suit and overcoat, soft brown hat and eyeglasses with tortoise shell rims.

the Brookline church and corporation. They are in harmony. The great majority are in favor of continuance of the pastoral relations between themselves and the Rev. Mr. Curtis."

Chief Justice Rugg went on to say that the Bill of Rights of Massachusetts provides that the several religious societies of this Commonwealth shall ever have the right to elect their pastors or religious teachers. That clause of the Constitution is an expression of the principle of democracy in concrete application to religious organizations. Its antecedents run back into the history of the struggle for religious freedom and its development is not complete until the adoption of Article 11 of the Amendments in 1833.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM.

"That constitutional guarantee secures against implied restrictions the tendency to change any modifications in creed and statements of belief and affords opportunity for evolution of religious thought to freedom in the choice of religious teachers.

"It relieves religious societies from the difficulties as to the interpretation of ancient forms of expression of denominational views by the simple expedient of permitting them, through the usual means of the majority, freely to accept their expounders of religious conceptions."

$250 REWARD

The offer of $250 reward, for information which will lead to the arrest and conviction of the thief or thieves, who on the night of Dec. 18th entered the poultry yards at Sorosis Farms, Marblehead, and stole one hundred of the finest breeding hens and roosters in the United States, is still open. The money loss is not being considered but the disruption of the plan of Sorosis Farms to raise poultry blood-standards has been seriously interfered with. Consequently the public generally and farmers particularly may be unable to secure as many pure-strain chicks as they desire at production cost. The hundred that were stolen were of the finest strain of Rhode Island Reds, all banded with register numbers.

A Settlement, Perhaps

Fifty Billion Veto
Empty Stein — Bloody Shirt

OUT OF THE discussion in Paris will come either a sane settlement of the German reparations question, and a start toward reconstruction in Europe, or a new period of complications not pleasant to contemplate.

Bonar Law is determined to reach a settlement in this first great enterprise of his Premiership, if possible. Poincare will probably be as reasonable as he dares to be, knowing how the French treat those that bring home less than they are expected to bring.

ITALY SHOWS great good sense, basing her hope of prosperity on her own effort rather than on what she gets from somebody else.

BELGIUM IS dissatisfied with England because nothing is said in the English plan about paying Belgium first of all. The British, sad to relate, are getting a little tired of Belgium's demands and claims.

Many years have passed since Belgium was holding back the German army at odds of a million to one, while France was getting ready rapidly and England slowly.

READ THE LATEST news about Marshall Field & Company, the commercial giant, and learn that it sometimes pays to stay in one place, provided you work while you stay.

Fifty years ago John G. Shedd joined the Marshall Field forces in a small place, with no better chance than anybody else.

Much later along came James Simpson, very young, with bright pink cheeks and golden hair, also starting at the bottom. Both have stayed ever since, but not at the bottom.

Marshall Field has gone to the other world. Shedd and Simpson own the business. Shedd decides to rest a little and becomes chairman of the board of directors. James Simpson becomes president, taking on the heavy harness. Both will stay in the same place, still working. But with the slight difference that they now own the place, and run it.

Young man, don't be in too great a hurry to change. There may be a gold mine, right where you are.

HOW MONEY piles up after it has been voted casually. To realize it, read President Harding's veto of the Bursum bill, that would increase the pensions

DEATH VICTIM AND WIFE WHO IS HELD

MRS. LILLIAN S. TUTTLE

WILLIE TUTTLE

CROONS TO BABE AS MATE LIES DEAD ON FLOOR

Gardner, Jan. 4.—Mrs. Lillian Streeter Tuttle crooned in the ear of her year-old baby and rocked back and forth in the parlor of her modest home. Stretched full length at her feet was the body of her husband, Willie.

Elsewhere in the house five other children slept, unaware that tragedy had wrecked the family.

Police were amazed at the scene. They inquired the cause of Tuttle's death. The woman's answers were somewhat incoherent. Finally they learned the father had drank a potion supposed to be oil of wintergreen for stomach pains and then toppled to the floor.

Medical Examiner Edward A. Sawyer reported that an analysis of the contents of the bottle showed that it contained synthetic wintergreen, ordinarily not poisonous, but enough to kill Tuttle, a sufferer from heart trouble.

Police are continuing an investigation of several suspicious circumstances. Mrs. Tuttle told of abuse by her husband, who carried a revolver, and several times threatened to kill her.

She was arraigned in Gardner Court following her arrest on a statutory charge. She pleaded guilty, and Judge Warfield held her in $1,500 bail until Monday.

At that time her six children will be turned over to the State.

The Tuttles lived in a four-room house on Shoddy Mill road. Shortly before the tragedy, police say one of Mrs. Tuttle's suitors had visited the house and ordered her husband out.

"This technical charge, a statutory offence, has been placed against Mrs. Tuttle until we can clear up the mystery surrounding her husband's sudden death," Acting Chief Burns told reporters.

Mr. Tuttle was apparently well during the early part of the evening on which he died, the police say. This is his second marriage. His children, by his first wife, say that they never knew their father to be troubled with his stomach.

ASKS 48-HOUR LAW IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

Concord, N. H., Jan. 4.—Enactment of a law providing for a 48-hour week for women and minors in industry was urged by Governor Fred H. Brown in his inaugural address to the Legislature today. This legislation was favored in the Democratic State platform in the November election.

"I believe that the result of the election gave the Legislature a clear mandate to enact a 48-hour law," the Governor said.

Reconciliation Rumor Proves False, as Date for the Trial Is Set for Next Thursday

New York, Jan. 4.—Rumors that Geraldine Farrar, former Metropolitan Opera star, and Lou Tellegen, her actor husband, were to settle their marital differences without resort to the courts, were spiked today when Supreme Court Justice Cohalan set down for trial next Thursday her suit for divorce.

The pending action is the fourth started by the diva. Three others were dropped.

Counsel for Tellegen vainly opposed fixing an early date for the trial.

SECRET ABANDONED.

Mr. Tellegen is in Portland, Ore., with a theatrical company." Attorney Arthur E. Schwartz told the court.

"It will be necessary for us to have an adjournment of proceedings until February 1 at the earliest."

Irwin Untermyer, the singer's lawyer, contended both sides had had ample time to prepare for trial, and Justice Cohalan supported him.

When the troubles of Farrar and Tellegen first were taken to court, about two years ago, both appeared anxious for secrecy. The papers in her first suit, for separation, were sealed and her counsel declined to talk about the case.

Today it was indicated that all desire for secrecy was gone and that the divorce suit would be tried fully in open court.

Dancer Is Called Perjurer as Judge Dismisses Suit Against Whitney

Nyack, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Evan Burrowes Fontaine, dancer, and her mother face indictment for perjury in connection with the dancer's $1,000,000 breach of promise suit against Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, son of Harry Payne Whitney.

Justice Tompkins of Supreme Court, in sustaining charges of fraud made by Whitney and vacating the annulment of the dancer's marriage to Sterling Adair of Waco, Tex., ordered the district attorney of Rockland County to take all records in the suit before the Grand Jury with a view of indicting the dancer and her mother.

He also recommended that the New York Bar Association investigate the practices of Charles Firestone of New York, attorney for the dancer when she obtained her annulment of marriage in July, 1920.

"A gross fraud has been perpetrated on the court," said Justice Tompkins; "and rank perjury has been committed by both the plaintiff and her mother."

Miss Fontaine, who is now said to be specializing in Oriental dances in San Francisco, obtained her annulment on the ground that she had lived with her husband three hours, whereas the records showed they had lived together for a year after their marriage, the justice said.

Adair died after his wife obtained the annulment and subsequently she brought her suit against young Whitney.

A prominent position in the suit was occupied by her infant son, born December 14, 1920, whom she said she was going to name Cornelius Whitney.

She was appearing in New York cabarets when she met young Whitney, known as "Sonny." That was in March, 1919, when he was a student at Yale.

The dancer said he proposed marriage and that she frequently visited him at Yale and several times had tea at the Whitney home in Fifth avenue.

FAMOUS DETECTIVE ARRIVES TOMORROW

When Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was asked recently whether he had ever met the counterpart of his famous Sherlock Holmes, he replied that Sir Basil Thomson, K. C., B., former head of Scotland Yard, who arrives in Boston tomorrow for a lecture at Symphony Hall January 8, fully measures up to his hero.

Sir Basil comes here as the guest of the Lions Club. Tomorrow afternoon he will be the guest of the club at a luncheon at the Parker House. Mayor Curley, Herbert A. Wilson, commissioner of police; Major-General Andre Brewster, commanding officer of the First Corps Area; Colonel Frank C. Bolles, chief of staff of the 94th Division, O. R. C., and Edward F. Gray, the British Consul-General, are among the guests invited.

100 FAMILIES IN N. Y. DRIVEN OUT BY FIRE

New York, Jan. 4 (By International News Service).—Nearly 100 families were driven from their beds into streets covered with four inches of snow early today by fire in Greenwich Village, firemen making thrilling rescues of Carl Kuhn, his wife and four children who were trapped in their tenement apartment by flame and smoke. Found unconscious, they were passed from one crew of firemen to another across an aerial ladder and then carried to safety down ladders.

DELINQUENTS AGAIN WARNED ON TAXES

City Collector William M. McMorrow today issued another warning to delinquent taxpayers for the past year. On January 15 next an additional 3 per cent. interest will go into effect on all taxes remaining unpaid on that date, above $200. This will be at the rate of 8 per cent. and be retroactive to October 15, 1922. There is still $7,000,000 due the city in taxes.

TO LIMIT RUSSIAN FAMINE RELIEF

Moscow, Jan. 4 (By the Associated Press).—The central commission combatting the famine has decided to propose that foreign relief organizations hereafter furnish only dry rations. The commission will also insist upon an immediate reduction in the number of soup kitchens and in the size of administrative staffs.

These steps will be taken, it was explained, with a view to reducing expenses.

It is contended that in some of the poorer areas the operations of the American Relief Administration have caused too great a drain upon the finances of the districts.

The newspapers publish reports that the famine is increasing in various parts of Russia. An Odessa dispatch says that in the Elisabetgrad district alone more than 200,000 persons are on the verge of starvation.

DEATH OF LIONESS BY RABIES UNUSUAL

Paris, Jan. 4.—An autopsy on the body of a young lioness, which sickened and died of a mysterious disease soon after its arrival from Abyssinia, has disclosed that death was due to hydrophobia. The case has stirred medical circles, inasmuch as it has been generally accepted that wild animals are immune from rabies. Efforts are being made to determine whether the beast was bitten by a mad dog or whether it ate the flesh of a rabid animal.

SAVES HER ERRING MATE

Thrice Abandoned, She Saves Husband and Girl From Jail

Three times has David Aichin of Lowell spurned his wife and children for another and thrice has his wife forgiven.

Today she faced the other woman and excused her of all blame for David's philandering.

And then her earnest pleadings saved the man she wed "for better or worse" from a year in jail, and his affinity from three months.

Judge Murray in Municipal Court suspended the sentence of both offenders after asking Mrs. Aichin to decide their fate.

Mrs. Aichin told the court David deserted her and her two youngsters the third time and so she went to work to support them. Then came sickness.

Driven to desperation she enlisted the aid of the Lowell police, and with an inspector from that city went to a South End lodging where David was arrested with Mary King, young and pert.

"I didn't come here exactly to plead for him," she said, "but if you could see your way clear to keep him out of jail I will gladly accept him back, providing he will stay home and treat us right."

Said Judge Murray: "I will leave it all to you. I will either place him on probation or send him to jail where he belongs."

"I'll give him a third chance," Mrs. Aichin replied, tears glistening in her eyes. "I do not blame the woman. It all rests with him. His folks are to blame for all our troubles. They refuse to mind their own business."

Then Judge Murray imposed the suspended sentences. To the girl he said:

"Young woman, keep away from this man or you will find yourself in a snow drift you won't be able to get out of.

"You see that woman here today? You can tell she has had a hard struggle. The least you can do is be human and allow them to live in happiness, if that is possible."

TRAFFIC HEAD SEEKS POINTS IN NEW YORK

Wholesale traffic changes in Boston may result from the present visit of Deputy Police Superintendent Thomas Goode to New York where he is studying conditions under which traffic police of that city operate.

According to officials, Deputy Goode will return with well formulated plans of relieving Boston's present traffic congestion, including changes in present oneway streets, parking space, increase of traffic personnel, and the probable recommendation of a traffic court to handle traffic violations exclusively.

Bought Drug on Eve of Rich Husband's Death

Hemphill, Tex., Jan. 4.—With the reopening here today of the preliminary hearing of Mrs. Lillian Knox, charged with the murder of her husband, Hiram Knox, wealthy lumberman, on November 26 last, both the defence and the prosecution were expected to play their trump cards.

Always the subject of comment, because of her lavish expenditures, the unusual splendor in which she lived, and gifts to workers and the populace in general, Mrs. Knox's name now is literally on every tongue in East Texas.

T. C. Carson, secretary to Mrs. Knox, admitted having bought a vial of a powerful sleeping potion at the request of Mrs. Knox. He also testified he called at the Hemphill express office for a package containing a black dress, sent to Mrs. Knox on the day the body was found.

Sebe Clark, an employe of the Knoxes, testified he heard Mrs. Knox threaten to kill Knox about four years ago, after the latter had angered her.

Susie Hodo and John Hodo, her husband, servants, testified Mr. Knox threatened suicide and complained that he had gone through all his money. Hodo testified also that Knox had protested that he would either keep Chester Collins away from the Knox home or kill him.

Collins is one of the attorneys defending Mrs. Knox.

ITALY REJECTS BRITISH PLAN ON REPARATIONS

Paris, Jan. 4. (By the Associated Press).—A French airplane carrying a special British courier with dispatches from Prime Minister Bonar Law to London, has fallen and the courier was killed in the crash, according to a telephone message received from London by the delegates to the Supreme Council.

Paris, Jan. 4 (By The Associated Press).—Premier Mussolini of Italy today instructed the Italian delegation to reject the British plan for reparations by Germany.

The British delegates averred that if the Italians opposed the British plan the British delegation would leave Paris.

The conference opened at 9:25 o'clock, having been delayed by the Italians who waited for word from Rome.

At 4:30 o'clock the conference adjourned and reassembled at 5:30 p. m.

The Italian delegation deposited fresh propositions in a final attempt to save the conference from a breakdown.

Poincare Queries Hughes About German "Pact"

Paris, Jan. 4 (By the Associated Press).—Premier Poincare sent a cable message today to Ambassador Jusserand in Washington asking him to see Secretary of State Hughes in connection with the statement made to the Associated Press yesterday by Baron von Rosenberg, the German Foreign Minister, on the German peace proposal, which, Premier Poincare contends, showed that the principal object of the non-war pact proposed by Germany was to obtain the evacuation of the Rhineland without the payment of reparations.

Premier Poincare's message asked Ambassador Jusserand, in taking up the Rosenberg statement with Secretary Hughes, to make the following observations:

First—That the object Germany had in view in making the proposition was manifesty, "as admitted by Baron von Rosenberg," to get the French to evacuate the left bank of the Rhine before the Germans had fulfilled their reparations obligations.

Second—That it is absurd to pretend that before entering the League of Nations Germany is not subject to all the clauses of the treaty of Versailles that bear Germany's signature, and that she is free today to attack France.

Third—That the proposition for non-aggression against France, Italy and Great Britain would leave Germany entirely free to attack the smaller allies of France, notably Poland and Czecho-Slovakia, and even neutrals, such as Denmark, to recover possession of territory inhabited by Danes and Poles, and to begin again to prepare her hegemony over Europe.

3 Youngsters Taken in Raid on School for Pickpockets

New York, Jan. 4.—Tired of a school which teaches only prosaic things, three boys, now under arrest, left it and enrolled in a school kept by a master of pickpocketing, thievery and general robbery. The boys practiced what they learned on subways and elevated lines.

The trio landed in the police court today. Twenty officers surrounded an apartment house on the East Side while two detectives made the arrests. The "Fagin" who ran the pickpocket school escaped.

The police declared that the "teacher" had several other boys in his classes and operated two big automobiles, one of which was taken when the boys were arrested.

MORE TROOPS AT MER ROUGE KLAN PROBE

Bastrop, La., Jan. 4.—Morehouse Parish maintained its status quo to day under control of civil authorities but with additional military forces on hand. The State Adjutant-General was ready to act in any situation that might arise in connection with the State's investigation of masked band operations which is expected to result in sensational disclosures and wholesale arrests.

The coming of Colonel L. A. Toombs, Adjutant-General of the Louisiana National Guard, and the arrival of a detachment of Cavalry to reinforce two companies of Infantry and a Machine Gun Company already stationed at Bastrop, the Parish seat, and the village of Mer Rouge, resulted in an air of expectancy and reports of impending action by the military to take over the police powers of the Parish.

Colonel Toombs denied that such action had been decided upon.

Colonel Toombs also refused to comment on reports which included one that a proclamation of martial law had been prepared and waited only promulgation to make it effective.

Attorney-General Coco, who will conduct the hearing into the kidnaping and slaying of Watt Daniels and Thomas F. Richards, Mer Rouge citizens, left New Orleans, accompanied by an assistant. He was expected to reach here today to prepare for the initial session of the inquisition tomorrow.

Dr. McKoin on Way to Mer Rouge

Baltimore, Jan. 4.—Dr. B. M. McKoin, who was released from a murder charge here yesterday in order that he may return to Louisiana a free man, is expected to arrive in that State tomorrow. Before leaving Dr. McKoin said he expected to go direct to Monroe to join his wife and children.

The physician is accompanied by Special Deputy Calhoun and Chief Detective Glynn of Louisiana.

Ask Law to Halt Breeding of the Unfit

Chicago, Jan. 4.—A law providing for sterilization of men and women who may become parents of unfit children is proposed in a report made public today by the psychopathic laboratory of the Chicago Municipal Court.

The proposed law defines the socially inadequate and unfit parents as those who are paupers, ne'er-do-wells, orphans, cripples, the blind and sufferers from certain chronic and infectious diseases as well as criminals, inebriates, feeble-minded and drug addicts.

ACCUSE KU KLUX OF DOMINATING INDIANA CITY

Michigan City, Ind., Jan. 4.—Ku Klux Klan charges against Maurice Bowen, city manager; Arthur Snyder, a member of the City Commission, and David Miller, city engineer, were pending before the Michigan City Commission today.

All three were named as members of the organization in an affidavit presented to the commission by Arthur M. Sullivan, former chief of police, who demanded reasons for his requested resignation.

"My discharge was caused by the fact that I refused to join the Klan. The climax came when I refused to permit a parade of masked Klansmen through Michigan City," Sullivan said.

"Conditions in Michigan City have become almost unbearable for persons not affiliated with the Klan. Night Captain Thomas Grunt and four or five members of the police force have resigned."

Burial Service by Radio on Steamer Without Bible

New York, Jan. 4. — When Captain A. Matthews died in mid-Atlantic aboard his ship, the Hatteras, about a week ago, the wireless told the United States liner President Adams, bound for Hoboken that there was no Bible aboard with which to conduct the burial service.

The necessary passages were sent to the Hatteras by radio. Later came this message from the Hatteras: "Thanks, body buried at noon with usual rites."

RICH YOUTH IS FREED IN MURDER

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 4 (By International News Service).—Percy A. Page, son of a wealthy Norfolk real estate operator, was exonerated of the charge that he killed Harry Quale Williams, son of a wealthy New York hotel proprietor, after an all-night investigation into the case.

Williams came to his death, it was said, from being pushed from the running board of a taxicab by Arthur R. Lambert, a chauffeur who was taken into custody this morning on a charge of manslaughter.

Page had been arrested and released on $10,000 bail following Williams' death and the discovery that Page was in his home suffering from the effects of a fight.

According to the police, Lambert and another chauffeur, Thomas Hogue, were called to the Williams residence to deliver some whiskey to the "party" in progress there. When they reached the residence, according to their story, Williams demanded a ride. They told the police he leaped on the running board of the car and Lambert gave him a push. Williams fell heavily on the pavement, his head striking the curbing.

Page admitted having a scuffle with Williams earlier in the evening

Baby Has a New Friend—

TWENTY years ago, two out of every five babies born died before they were able to walk or talk. Through the persistent, unselfish work of medical associations, health authorities and women's welfare organizations, the infant mortality rate has been reduced one-half. By improved feeding and better observance of the laws of hygiene and sanitation an almost revolutionary advance has been made in the protection of infant life. A baby born now has twice the chance to live that it would have had if born at the beginning of this century.

By the discovery of Zonite another great advance is made in the protection of baby's health and life. For years medical science has recognized the need of a powerful, healing, non-poisonous antiseptic that might be used with safety on the delicate skin and membrane of infants and children. Zonite supplies this long-felt want.

Think what it means to mothers to have at hand this clean, wholesome, powerful antiseptic that will kill disease germs with which it comes in contact and yet is so healing, so soothing, and so safe to use.

Where Danger Lies

Germs constantly threaten the safety of the little ones, for germs are everywhere. A glass of water may be as clear as crystal yet contain the germs of disease. The milk bottles, the dishes, the hands, may look clean but any physician will tell you that they may be reeking with deadly, invisible germs.

Zonite Gives Protection

From the time baby comes into the world, Zonite will guard this new life from the insidious attack of deadly bacteria. It will sterilize his milk bottles and nipples. It will protect him against malignant disease germs through babyhood. It will heal the little playtime hurts and accidents of childhood. It will shield him from the contagion of the school room. It will guard him against infection and disease throughout his entire manhood.

Facts About Zonite

Zonite is a clear, colorless, non-odorous liquid.

Zonite is absolutely non-poisonous, clean, and wholesome.

Zonite does not stain. It disinfects and deodorizes without leaving any lasting odor of its own.

Properly diluted, Zonite can be applied to the delicate skin, flesh, or membrane of infants and children with perfect safety.

On account of its great germicidal power, non-poisonous character, and healing, soothing properties, Zonite is the ideal antiseptic for the nursery.

Zonite is more than forty times as powerful as peroxide of hydrogen. It is from 40 to 100 times as powerful as many popular mild antiseptics.

Zonite aids the home of deadly poisons.

WIFE TOOK TRIP ABROAD WITH YOUTH IN $500,000 GEM ROBBERY

STRANGE ROMANCE DISCLOSED

Mrs. Schoellkopf, Victim of Theft, Insists Her Hired Dancing Partner Is Innocent

New York, Jan. 4 (By International News Service).—C. P. Hugo Schoellkopf, elderly millionaire of Buffalo, whose wife was robbed of $500,000 worth of jewelry in this city, showed a change of heart today towards the old family friend, F. Barrett Carman, actor, who is being held on the charge of complicity.

"The law must take its course," Schoellkopf was alleged to have said. Previously he had emphatically professed his belief in Carman's complete innocence.

Carman was held [illegible] thout bond until tomorrow by [illegible] Sims. His will be arraign[illegible] morrow when the quest[illegible] will be raised. In the [illegible] the police hope to make [illegible] ore arrests.

[illegible]ul woman known as [illegible]e" has been found by the police. She is said to have been the companion of one of the men who robbed Mrs. Schoellkopf.

The mystery brought to light the strange situation of a 62-year-old husband married to a 38-year-old wife, giving in to every whim of her extravagant love for the display of costly jewels, hiring a youthful male companion to travel the world with her so that she might have a dancing partner.

"HE IS INNOCENT."

Now this dancing partner, Frank Carmen, actor and artist, is under arrest charged with the theft of the half million dollars worth of jewels. But Mrs. Schoellkopf stands by Carmen and declares "he is innocent."

A woman known as Mrs. Lewis, said to have been a companion of one of the men who rented the apartment where Mrs. Schoellkopf was robbed, has been located by the police. It is not known what the authorities hope to gain from this woman in the way of information.

Meanwhile representatives of four insurance companies are planning to offer the greatest reward in New York's criminal history for the recovery of the jewels.

STORIES DO NOT FIT.

The police declare there has been a discrepancy in the testimony of Mrs. Schoellkopf both as to the treatment she received at the hands of the bandits and as to her acquaintanceship with Carmen. Saying at first the robbers had mistreated her, Mrs. Schoellkopf today changed her story and said they acted like "perfect gentlemen."

Inquiry in Buffalo, where the Schoellkopf name is one to conjure with—Mr. Schoellkopf, being one of the great financial powers of western New York—showed that Mrs. Schoellkopf and Carmen had known each other a long time, and that they made a trip to Europe together, with the acquiescence of Schoellkopf, and that Carmen's bills were paid by the husband. Further investigation showed that Carmen and the handsome Buffalo matron were seen together on numerous occasions recently in Broadway cafes and dance palaces.

HER THIRD MARRIAGE.

Mrs. Schoellkopf's marriage adventures began when she was Irene Marlock of New York. At eighteen, a titian-haired beauty, she was married to Jerome Beller. A son of this union, now married, lives in Ithaca, N. Y. The second marriage was to Michael Simon, a Rochester business man, and eight years ago she divorced him.

Schoellkopf, who had been married once before, met her shortly after her second divorce, and they were married in Philadelphia.

But the marriage, with the many years between their ages, had not been one of full congeniality, it is said in Buffalo.

Musterole is a counter-irritant that relieves congestion (which is what a cold really is) and stimulates circulation.

It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blister.

Just rub it on with your fingertips. First you will feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

2 ALARMS FOR DORCHESTER FACTORY FIRE

Firemen fought their way through the blizzard today to a two-alarm fire in the George L. Gleason factory at No. 37 Von Hillern street, Dorchester, which did damage estimated at $50,000.

The cause of the fire is as yet undetermined. It was discovered by night watchman William Fleming. When District Chief Walter McLean arrived he ordered a second alarm, for the flames were shooting up through the entire back of the building.

The factory is located in a sparsely settled section and the wind played on it from all directions. Ladder 15 broke down 1,000 yards from the spot and was unable to get into action.

On the second floor 200,000 burlap bags were stored and the first floor was filled with bones used in making fertilizer. There was also a large quantity of cocoa, cocoa shells and cocoa dust in the place.

The heaviest damage was done on the second floor. Water damage caused property loss on the first floor.

DELEGATION OF N. E. TO HEAR SHIPPING PLEA

Manager Frank S. Davis of the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce announced today that a large delegation from Boston, Portland, Me., Providence, R. I., and other New England seaports, who are interested in the port differential case now pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission, will go to Washington to hear the final arguments by counsel in the case.

About 250 prominent shipping men, importers, exporters and others interested have signified their intention of going and one or more special sleeping car trains will be engaged by Manager Davis.

The taking of evidence by Attorney Examiner Gerry was completed at Philadelphia last month.

The total cost of that generous effort, according to President Harding, would have been at least fifty thousand millions of dollars. You could do a good deal with that.

MR. AL SMITH, Governor of New York, supposed to be a candidate for the Presidency, follows Governor Edwards of New Jersey, also a candidate, and demands beer and wine for a thirsty people.

That will make a new interesting issue in the next national election. The Republican candidate, you may be sure, will say little, probably nothing, about beer and wine. Henry Ford, who will be in the ring, will undoubtedly be out for flat prohibition. He has always been a total abstainer—in spite of the fact that his doctor tells him his health would be better and he could live longer and do more work if he would take a little light red wine.

522 KILLED IN BAY STATE BY AUTOS

Autos took a toll of 522 lives in this State in the year just closed.

Despite that toll State Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin said that the improved conditions are actually remarkable.

The death toll was twenty-two less than in 1921, despite the fact there were 70,000 more autos on the road.

Heavy penalties dealt out to vi[illegible]chating motorists and the State-wide crusade for safety-first were the reasons given by Goodwin for the improvement.

$5,000,000 GASOLINE TAX AND OLD AGE PENSIONS URGED BY COX

tion be made for only biennial sessions of the General Court.

State Finances

It is my purpose to follow the same general financial policy of the past two years under which satisfying progress was made. On December 1, 1920, the net direct State debt was $35,128,259. On December 1, 1922, that debt was $25,713,611. The net direct State debt has been reduced by $11,035,627 in the past two years, and leaves that debt considerably lower than at any time during the past ten years.

The State tax was reduced last year by $2,000,000, and although the work of all departments has been well done and a liberal program of improvements and additions to our institutions has been carried out, fortunately there is a balance of $5,000,000 in the treasury as we start the fiscal year.

Municipal Finance

The burden of local taxation is far more onerous than the comparatively small tax levied by the Commonwealth. Excessive local taxation is a most important factor in checking community growth, discouraging industry, and depressing property values.

Yet it is evident that municipalities will be required to undertake extensive public improvements to meet changed conditions and to relieve the congestion caused by the general use of motor vehicles. I recommend that the Mayor of every city be given the same power of absolute veto over loans and items in loan bills that was conferred upon the Mayor of Boston in 1909.

I also recommend that means be provided so that, when occasion arises, there may be an impartial investigation of the finances of any city, except Boston and those of other municipalities which have permanent finance commissions.

Autos and Highways

The solution of traffic congestion on our main highways is of vital concern. During the past year the number of motor vehicles in Massachusetts increased over 70,000—the largest increase in any one year.

During my administration I have had the co-operation of the Legislature in a policy devoting the funds received from the registration of motor vehicles to improving the highways. The present revenue from this source is not sufficient to permit a highway building program which will keep abreast with the growing needs.

As an equitable method of providing the increased funds necessary, I recommend a tax upon gasoline and other fuels used in propelling motor vehicles. Such a tax has been adopted in many other States with satisfactory results. The amount of gasoline consumed bears a very direct proportion to the use and wear and tear upon the roads. It is obvious that the large car, in constant use, tears up the road more than does the small, light car, and the amount of fuel used in each varies in proportion to use, size and weight. Thus, the tax proposed bears proportionately on each. The owner of a small car, using little gasoline, and perhaps using his car only a small portion of the year, would pay a smaller tax than the owner of a big car in constant use. Such a tax also puts a burden upon the car which is operated but not registered in Massachusetts.

The Webster Commission recommended a tax of 2 cents per gallon upon gasoline and other motor vehicle fuel brought into the State or manufactured herein, to be collected by the Tax Commissioner from the wholesale distributors, who would pass it along to the motor vehicle owners.

In my judgment the motor users of the Commonwealth desires a program of road building which shall be second to none in the country, and they are willing to meet in an equitable way the cost of such a program.

Public Health

On the whole, the year 1921 gave the most satisfactory results hitherto experienced in life conservation in the Commonwealth. The year 1922 has continued to be equally as favorable, and although it is too early to have final and complete statistics, it is obvious that in some particulars the health record of 1921 has been still further bettered.

The outstanding feature of health accomplishment has been the focusing of attention on child health. The attitude of this Commonwealth in reference to maternal and child hygiene has been somewhat misrepresented outside of Massachusetts.

Fuel Emergency

The shortage of anthracite coal in Massachusetts, and the consequent suffering and inconvenience, is due to causes beyond our control. The amount of that coal brought into Massachusetts between April 1 and November 1, 1922, was 2,054,009 less tons than during the corresponding period in 1921.

A prolonged industrial controversy which involves the cessation of coal-mining operation for more than five months, and which jeopardizes the health and comfort of all who live in our cold Winter climate, ought never be tolerated again in this free country. Massachusetts can have no control of the production and sale of coal beyond its boundaries, but when once coal arrives here, then our power begins. Fortunately, the Legislature last June made quick response to my request and revived the wartime powers of the Governor with respect to coal.

Acting under such authority an Emergency Fuel Committee was created, and James J. Phelan, Esq., was appointed Emergency Fuel Administrator. Their concerted and vigorous action has done much to remedy a bad situation.

Ask Outrageous Prices

Outrageous prices continue to be quoted within our State for anthracite coal f. o. b. at the Pennsylvania mines. In my judgment the Federal government should enact suitable legislation to prevent such abuse, as indeed it should prohibit re-sales which are usually nothing more or less than speculations.

The Federal government would have our warm approval if it would compel a standard of coal, an unfortunately much of our supply contains an excessive percentage of impurities, commonly called "bone" and "slate."

Although Massachusetts and other States are impotent to take needful action in these exasperating premises, as our first problem is to get coal within our borders at any cost, and adequate regulation of the coal business must be by Federal action, nevertheless the power of the Massachusetts Emergency Fuel Administration should be strengthened so that he may better regulate distribution within the State, and limit Massachusetts dealers to a reasonable profit on their intrastate sales.

New England Railroads

The question of the future policy of the New England States towards their railroads has been brought to the front by the provisions of the Esch-Cummins Act, which authorize the Interstate Commerce Commission to prepare and adopt a plan for consolidating all the railroads of the country into a limited number of systems.

For the New England lines the Commission suggested three alternative plans:—

1. Consolidation of the northern New England railroads with the New York Central System, and of the southern New England railroads with the Baltimore & Ohio.

2. The consolidation of all the New England railroads into an "all New England" system.

3. The creation of a New England-Great Lakes system by consolidating with the "all New England" group the Lackawanna and Delaware & Hudson and certain smaller railroads.

Although the Esch-Cummins Act does not make consolidations compulsory, it raises questions of railroad policy which may become by future legislation of vital consequence to all the New England States.

N. E. Roads Crippled

It is common knowledge that the condition of the New England railroads has been very serious since the termination of government control. The Federal government has loaned them large sums of money, while their financial difficulties, combined with the effects of business depression and the labor controversies of the past year, have crippled their service.

There is no ground for discouragement as to the future of Massachusetts industries. Increasing competition of other sections of the country, although emphasizing some of our disadvantages, such as distance from raw materials, also tends to make more evident its advantages of New England's position, with its long coastline and its easy and direct access to the world's richest and greatest market—the population within one hundred miles of the Atlantic seaboard.

The New England States in the interest of New England industry should have the best equipped and most efficiently operated railroads in the United States. In the interest of New England industry the various modes of transportation, railroads, motor trucks and coastwise shipping should be coordinated to bring about the most efficient and most economical service to our industries and to the public.

It is therefore a matter of great gratification that the Joint New England Railroad Committee has construed broadly its commission from the New England Governors, and has undertaken as the foundation for its consideration of the consolidated question an intensive study of the New England railroad.

In order that the committee may work to the best advantage, it is recommended that $125,000 be appropriated to meet the share of Massachusetts in the expenses of the Joint New England Committee.

Freight Differentials

The Commonwealth has made a determined effort to stimulate the business of her ports, and for that purpose has expended large sums in dredging harbors, making rail connections, providing space for storage, and in other ways developing port facilities.

While there is a general disappointment that the business of our ports has failed to keep pace with the tremendous growth of commerce in other Atlantic ports, it is gratifying to note that during the past few months there has been a substantial increase, particularly in imports.

Frankly recognizing the difficulty of competition under such unfavorable conditions, several of the great commercial bodies of New England have joined with the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce in petitioning the Interstate Commerce Commission for the equalization of rates to all New England ports and New York, Philadelphia, Norfolk and other Atlantic and Gulf ports.

There can be no answer to the justice of New England's demand for fair treatment. The case before the Interstate Commerce Commission is being prosecuted ably and vigorously. The public has a vital interest in securing a favorable decision. I have therefore directed that the Commonwealth be joined as a party to the suit. With the approval of the Executive Council, $2,500 has been appropriated from the Governor's contingent fund. It is recommended that further sums be appropriated by the Legislature as the case proceeds.

Urges New State Prisons

For the past two years I have urged the establishment of a more modern method of penology, and have urged particularly that the jails and houses of correction, now maintained by fourteen separate counties with varying standards, be consolidated under the direct control of the Commonwealth.

In spite of the tremendously organized opposition to the proposal, I am still convinced that Massachusetts would profit immeasurably by such a change.

I was impressed by the criticisms made of the present State Prison, so much so that I asked Hon. W. Cameron Forbes to make an investigation of the institution. Because of his work as Governor of the Philippines in remolding the prison system of those islands, I believed his judgment would carry great weight.

He undertook the voluntary commission, and after several months of study has advised me that Charlestown prison should be

Suffered Tortures for Years—Now Telling Good News to Others

"Don't Believe That Old Humbug About 'Uric Acid' Being the Cause of Rheumatism—It Is Not So!"

Emphatically asserting that thousands of unfortunate sufferers have been led into taking wrong treatments under the old and false belief that "URIC ACID" causes rheumatism, Pastor H. W. Reed says:

"As do some of our highest medical authorities, I also now know that 'Uric Acid' never did and never will cause rheumatism! But it took me many years to find out this truth. I learned how to get rid of my rheumatism, and recover my strength and health through reading 'The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism,' a work written by an authority who has scientifically studied the causes and treatment of rheumatism and its associated disorders for over twenty years. It was, indeed, a veritable revelation!

"I had suffered agony for years from rheumatism and its attendant disorders, and Mrs. Reed was also tortured with the demon Neuritis, almost beyond endurance. We had read and talked so much about 'Uric Acid' that even our minds seemed poisoned. But the 'Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism' made it all clear to us, and now we are both free from the suffering and misery we endured so many years. I really believe that I was the hardest man in the world to convert. For me to discard the old Uric Acid theory, and what I now know to be absolutely false, for the new, scientific understanding of the cause and cure of rheumatism, was almost like asking me to change my religious beliefs! But I did change, and it was a fortunate day for me and mine when I did so."

NOTE: "The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism" referred to above by Pastor Reed lays bare facts about rheumatism and its associate disorders overlooked by many doctors and scientists for centuries past. It is a work that should be in the hands of every man and woman who has the slightest symptoms of rheumatism, neuritis, sciatica, lumbago or gout. Fortunately, anyone who sends name and address to the author, H. P. Clearwater, 426-M Street, Hallowell, Maine, will receive a copy of "The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism," by mail, postage paid and absolutely free. Readers of the AMERICAN should send now lest you forget the address! If you are not a sufferer cut out this explanation and hand or mail it to some afflicted friend or acquaintance.

GOVERNOR COX ASKS JAIL TERMS FOR PROFITEERING COAL MEN

The Commissioner of Correction has repeatedly made the same recommendation, as indeed have various heads of the department. It is felt that the principal evils of the prison cannot be corrected under the existing physical conditions. The cells are not well ventilated or well lighted. Modern sanitary arrangements are lacking.

The health statistics of the prison are good. The proportion of sick is small. The average daily number in the hospital for the year 1921 was 3½, or less than 1 per cent. of the total prison population. Nevertheless, the time seems to have arrived when the Charlestown site should be abandoned.

I recommend that the Governor be authorized to appoint an unpaid commission of five, who shall after study, report to the next session upon the location of a new prison, upon plans for its construction, or upon plans for a new reformatory.

Safety Education

In my first inaugural address attention was called to the large number of fatalities and accidents to children caused by motor vehicles, and it was recommended that every elementary school be asked to set aside a few minutes each week for the purpose of impressing upon the children the danger in the use of our streets and highways, and the absolute need of caution in such use.

It was recommended that the Commissioner of Education be given authority and facilities for assembling facts and methods of presentation to be available for the use of school teachers.

Again I renew those recommendations. In 1921 there were 193 children killed and 3,433 injured in motor vehicle accidents on our highways, and in the past year 209 have been killed and 4,414 injured.

Child Labor Problem

Although Massachusetts is one of the great industrial States of the Union, it has for years restricted the employment of children. Massachusetts would not turn backward. The wisdom of such humane legislation has been abundantly justified. Her citizens should not be compelled, however, to submit the products of their factories in competition with those in States where child labor is permitted. I recommend that the National Congress be memorialized in favor of an amendment to the Federal Constitution which would permit legislation making it forever impossible to employ children in the industries of the United States.

Unemployment Situation

In my inaugural address for 1921 I advocated that a program of future developments—so far as the construction of new buildings, new highways, improvements of harbors, and public works in general is concerned—be determined in advance, and tentative plans made so that in periods of depression such work may be undertaken.

Two objects would be accomplished by the adoption of this recommendation: First, the tremendous help toward eliminating unemployment, and second, the securing of improvements at an undoubtedly lower cost than could be obtained at times when business is exceptionally good.

"Avoro Shor" Ballet

As a member of the Legislature of 1911, I voted for the present direct primary law. I believed in the principle of direct nominations then—I do today. There is, however, much criticism against the way in which the State-wide direct primary has operated in Massachusetts.

To the end that the direct primary system may operate to better advantage, and that the efficiency of the State administration may be promoted, again I urge that the Constitution be amended so that the Governor be given the power to appoint for the same term as his own the State officers,—the Secretary of the Commonwealth, the Treasurer and Receiver-General, the Auditor, and the Attorney-General.

Booms Memorial

The people of Massachusetts are profoundly grateful to the thousands of young men who served in the World War. Their valor, their devotion, and their patriotic response to a great call illuminate the brightest pages of all our history.

Various suggestions as to a memorial have been made, but no definite action has been taken, aside from the monument to be erected in France. In justice the desire of the veterans themselves should received the most important consideration in the development of any plan of memorial. That desire may not have taken concrete form as yet, but there has been a widely expressed opinion that our most priceless records should be associated with the State House itself.

Raise Fund by Taxes

It is hoped that the special $3 poll tax which was levied to pay for the $100 gratuity to all Massachusetts soldiers and sailors will, upon its collection this year, provide sufficient funds to discharge the obligation incurred on that account. Our citizens would willingly pay such a tax for an additional year if its proceeds were to be devoted to a suitable tribute to Massachusetts service men. On such a basis the memorial building could be built and paid for without increasing the State bonded indebtedness.

Old Age Pension

There are two periods in the life of a human being when there is an instinctive desire to give aid to those in need—childhood and old age. The Commonwealth has extended its hand to help children in distress. The rapidity of vibration of our present social system makes it possible for some to know untold comfort and luxury.

We have extended help to widows with dependent children. I would that I could recommend the adoption of a general system of old-age pensions. I cannot do so, for I remember that Massachusetts is but one of forty-eight States, and the burden of taxation to sustain such a system would crush our people as they tried to compete for existence with those of other States.

Asks $100,000 Fund

Nevertheless, I believe that the sentiment for old-age pensions is increasing in strength, and that some of my successors in the not distant future will be directly confronted with that problem. If there is any reasonable way to anticipate such a problem and solve it in advance, then it becomes our duty to do so. I suggest that the Governor be given authority to appoint an unpaid commission of five to hold office for ten years; that the commission be given an appropriation of $100,000 to start a fund for old-age pensions, the fund not to be available for pensions until ten years from the date of the appointment of the commission; that the public be asked to subscribe to this fund, and a general interest be stimulated in it.

GOVERNOR COX INAUGURATED

the 48-hour law and recommended that Congress be urged to make it national while abolishing child labor.

He defended the direct primary system but recommended that the State Treasurer, State Auditor, Secretary of State and Attorney-General be appointed by the Governor instead of being elected in the future by the people.

He urged the Legislature to abandon the annual sessions and to hold biennial sessions as well as biennial elections.

He urged the rapid extension of the State's new system of child hygiene and maternal health maternity benefits.

He again dafied the power of the "county rings" and demanded State control of the county penal institutions.

He asked for the installation of a "safety first" course in the public schools, to teach children to avoid auto accidents, and he insisted upon a new system of inspection of the water-dams to prevent a recurrence of the Williamsett disaster.

PLANS TO AID JOBLESS.

H demanded the adoption of a five-years' program of public construction, among other things to relieve unemployment.

He revealed that a secret inspection of Charlestown State Prison had been made at his request by General W. Cameron Forbes, former Governor-general of the Philippines, who found the old prison obsolete and archaic.

SCENE BRILLIANT ONE.

Governor Cox was inaugurated for a second term amid the traditional scenes of ceremonial brilliancy which have always made the inauguration the most imposing event of state. He subscribed to the oath of office and delivered his inaugural address from the rostrum in the Hall of Representatives, flanked by the justices of the Supreme and Superior Courts, his own military staff, the representatives of the United States Army and Navy, the former Governors and the foremost representatives of the civic life of the State.

The joint session of Senate and House was assembled in the hall with hundreds of fortunate visitors who found places of vantage in the auditorium.

Mrs. Cox entertained a party of special guests in the Speaker's gallery of the Hall of Representatives. The party included little Nancy Cox, their daughter; Mrs. Charles S. Cox, the Governor's mother, and Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller. Miss Mary Allen, Mrs. Jaques M. Cattell, Mrs. Harry F. Briggs, Mrs. Mark Hersey, Mrs. Henry A. Wiley, Mrs. George S. Curran, Mrs. William W. Glendorff, Mrs. Francis W. Aldrich, Mrs. Charles S. Smith, Mrs. John A. White, Mrs. Charles Lawrence Burrill, Mrs. Edwin T. Wright, Mrs. Irene C. Fiske, Mrs. Frederic S. Snyder, Mrs. William M. Butler, Mrs. Frederic Cook, Mrs. J. R. Benton, Mrs. James Jackson, Mrs. Pauline H. Thayer, Mrs. William Lowell Putnam, Mrs. John Q. A. Brackett, Mrs. Bayard Thayer, Mrs. Louis K. Liggett, Miss Dorothy Cox, Mrs. Clarence R. Edwards, Mrs. Frank H. Foss, Mrs. Anna C. B. Tillinghast, Mrs. E. Loring Young.

While the Governor's long address was heard with unabated interest by the distinguished assemblage, his scathing denunciation of the coal profiteers demanded the most tense consideration.

SCORES COAL PROFITEERS.

"A prolonged industrial control very . . . which jeopardizes the health and comfort of all who live in our cold Winter climate, ought never to be tolerated again in this free country," he declared in ringing tones.

"Outrageous prices continue to be quoted within our State for anthracoal f. o. b. at the Pennsylvania mines. The Federal government should enact suitable legislation to prevent such abuse, as, indeed, it should prohibit resales, which are usually nothing more or less than speculations.

"The Federal government would have our warm approval if it would compel a standard of coal as, unfortunately, much of our coal supply contains an excessive percentage of impurities, commonly called 'bone and slate.'"

Governor Cox said the demand for old-age pensions is rapidly increasing. Some one of his successors, in the not distant future, will be obliged to install the system. The best intentioned and hardest-working men and women often find themselves unable to acquire a competence for their declining years. The poor house is no reward for faithful service.

He asked for an appropriation of $100,000 to start an old age pension fund, the first payments from the fund to the needy to begin ten years from now.

Governor Cox said he was for the direct primaries twelve years ago when he was a member of the Legislature, and he is just as intent for them today. He said confusion and criticism have resulted from the number of candidates at each election. This can be improved, he said, and the Governor can be made more responsible to the people by having him appoint the Big Four State officers.

So many laws are being passed he said, that the average lawyer finds it difficult to keep pace with them. Accordingly, the Legislature might meet once in two years. Special sessions could be called for emergencies.

STATE DEBT REDUCED.

He said the State debt has been reduced $11,400,000 the past two years, the State tax reduced $5,000,000 and the new year begins with $3,000,000 cash on hand. More savings can be made, he expects. He said any analysis of the State's expenses show that out of every $1 spent, 19.83 cents go for the care of the insane, 11.86 for beneficiaries of the State Department of Public Welfare.

He said the Governor ought to be given power to appoint a finance commission for an immediate investigation of any financial scandals which may arise except in those places like Boston, which have permanent finance commissions.

SAFETY FIRST COURSES.

An appropriation to fight the corn borer, whose ravages in the truck garden centres adjacent to Boston alone have destroyed hundreds of thousands of dollars of crops, was recommended by him.

The fact that 209 children were killed and 4,414 injured in auto accidents last year ought to be sufficient to demand the establishment of the safety-first courses in the schools, he said. Increased vigor by the police will also tend to reduce fatal accidents, he said.

Jolly Smart Set Colony Spending Winter on North Shore, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

AMONG the jolliest "younger-marrieds" of the Winter colony along the North Shore are Mr. and Mrs. John Simpkins (Miriam Fenno). They are, I believe, settled for the season at the Simpkins place in Beverly Farms, while Mrs. Simpkins' mother, the senior Mrs. "Nat" Simpkins, is spending the cold months in the South.

One of the most widely-heralded nuptial events of the Fall was the ceremony solemnized in the tiny St. John's Church at the Farms, which is as smart as it's small— which transformed the popular daughter of the J. Brooks Fennos into Mrs. John Simpkins. With her tall, slender figure and lovely brunette coloring, the one-time "Mim" Fenno—as she is known to her intimates—made a bride very easy to look upon.

Other prominent members of the Winter colony at the Farms are the "Pete" Sortwells (Elise Pollard), whose place there is known as "Little Comfort." Down on the Shore everyone knows the tiny Sortwell girls, whose demure little figures are always arrayed alike. Now that a son and heir has joined the household, sport-loving "Pete" Sortwell is a very happy man.

Right next door to Beverly Farms is Pride's Crossing, which reminds me that Mrs. Grafton Winthrop Minot, the former Constance Gardner, is staying very late this year at "Alhambra," as her place at Pride's is known. During the past season Mrs. Minot—she's the granddaughter of Senator Lodge—gave a number of jolly parties at "Alhambra," when many of her guests were people of note in the world of politics and diplomacy. Not until some time this month, I believe, is Mrs. Minot returning with her young family to the Winter place in Washington.

MR. AND MRS. ALEXANDER WINSOR of Boston have sailed from New York on board the Berengaria, bound for Europe. Prior to their sailing the Winsors stopped for a while at the Ritz-Carlton.

MRS. FREDERIC J. COTTON and her daughter, Miss Jean Cotton, of Beacon street, have been spending the holidays at their country place near Baltimore on the Severn River.

During their stay there they entertained a house-party of friends of Jean Cottons, who, I believe, is interested in art, and has been attending school where those who worship the Muses may give their ambitions full sway. Last Winter, her debutante year, the Cottons gave quite a number of affairs for their daughter, taking her down to the Oriole City to partake of the bud festivities there as well.

DR. AND MRS. EDWARD C. STREETER are among the Bostonians spending the Winter abroad. They have returned their home at No. 280 Beacon street to Mr. and Mrs. Philip Stockton and their family.

ADD 32 VETERANS TO CONSTABULARY

A force of thirty-two men, all of them World War veterans, was added to the State Constabulary today. The Constabulary force now numbers about 125 men. The maximum force, under present law, will be 140. The new men will be given a three-months training course at the Commonwealth Armory.

COURT REFUSES TO LIBERATE BERGDOLL

By International News Service.

Kansas City, Kas., Jan. 4.—Application of Edwin Bergdoll, rich Philadelphia draft dodger, for release from the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kas., where he is serving a four-year sentence for draft evasion, was denied today in Federal Court here. Bergdoll instituted habeas corpus proceedings seeking release on the ground that the law under which he was sentenced had been voided by Presidential proclamation after the armistice.

SYMBOLICAL DRAMA GIVEN BY HAMPDEN

"The Servant in the House," Charles Rann Kennedy's famous symbolical play, was presented by Walter Hampden and his able company in the Boston Opera House.

Mr. Hampden as Manson, the butler, gave an impressive performance. His support was excellent, being featured particularly by the masterful interpretation by Ernest Rowan of the role of Robert, the scapegrace of the three brothers around whom the plot revolves.

Hampden made the symbolical figure strangely compelling by his dignity and effective restraint. The part of the mercenary bishop was played by the versatile Edward Cushman, who gave a truly excellent performance. William Sauter, as the priest beset by doubts; Elsie Herndon Kearns, as the wife; Mabel Moore and Le Roi Operty were the others of the cast.

A large audience enthusiastically received the offering. Mr. Hampden received three curtain calls at the conclusion of the play.

RUSSIAN TENOR IN SPLENDID RECITAL

In the short space of an hour at Jordan Hall last night was crowded more real pleasure and musical enjoyment than has been offered to the concert audiences of Boston in some time.

Vladimir Rosing, Russian tenor, who was heard here in one or two recitals last Winter, was the artist, and that he is an artist of the very first rank is unquestioned in the minds of those who sat hanging on his every tone and slightest inflection.

The Russian chose his program with much care, giving a splendid assortment of Ruslan, French, German, English and more delightful still, Irish songs. There were arias from the "Night of Mai" and "Prince Igor"

BOY ADMITS KILLING HIS "BRUTAL" FATHER

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 4.—Fred Steppe, aged fourteen, killed his father, Edward Steppe while he slept "for the good of my sister, myself and the community," he told Sherriff Farrow, when that official went to the Steppe home, twenty miles from here to day to arrest him. The boy, according to the Sheriff, told in detail of the killing of his father with a single-barrel shotgun. He complained that his father had been "brutal"

MANY INJURED BY BOMB IN DUBLIN

Dublin, Jan. 4. (By International News Service).—A number of civilians, including two girls, were wounded today in bomb explosions at Fowler Memorial Hall and the General Postoffice Building.

Sinn Fein headquarters denied the report that Eamon De Valera presided at a meeting yesterday of the peace faction of the Republicans and his own followers.

It was stated that the section of the Sinn Fein loyal to De Valera had made no peace overtures, because of De Valera's opposition.

The Sinn Feiners have reoccupied their old headquarters without interference from the Free State government.

Theatre Place to "Check Your Hat and Brains"

New York, Jan. 4.—"The theatre has become a place to check your brain along with your hat," Changing Pollock, playwright, told the Advertising Club.

MOTHER JAILED FOR NEGLECT OF FIVE

Ruth Van Cott, thirty-five years old, employed as a cook at No. 2 Binney street, Roxbury, was sentenced to Sherborn today when she was convicted in the Roxbury Court of neglecting to provide for her family of five small children.

The complaint was made against her by Margaret Hourin, an investigator in the division of child guardianship of the State Department of Public Welfare. The defendant has been after the woman, the investigator said, since 1917. All five of the children are in the care of the department. The woman testified that she has a husband "somewhere between here and California."

DOCTOR BRIDES HITS BACK WITH COUNTER CHARGES

Lavished Stolen Clothes on His Two Loves

HELD ON CHARGE OF THEFT

Back Bay Man to Be Examined for His Sanity by Court Order

Two fur coats and heaps of silk garments were lavished by Gordon W. Ayer on two spritely misses of the Back Bay, all of which would have been all right but—

Gordon charged these articles to other persons' accounts in five department stores, according to the police so—

Officers aped to No. 20 Charlesgate West, where Gordon maintained a bachelor apartment, and took him to municipal court.

There Judge Sullivan decided a charge of the larceny of $1,500 worth of merchandise should be continued until tomorrow to permit Dr. Sandos, alienist, to make an examination.

The court reached this decision after attorneys for the young prisoner made known that he was the son of a prominent Newton man, had been a lieutenant in the naval reserve and had recently acted rather strangely.

Edward O'Halloran of the Stores Mutual Protective Association averred it was not a "psychopathic case but rather riotous living," and told how the gay Gordon had given each of his favorites a fine fur coat.

Ayer is twenty-six. He is the son of Henry P. Ayer of No. 23 Lakewood street, Newton Highlands, a highly fashionable section. The father is in the leather business.

Ayer was married on July 15, 1918, to Miss Elizabeth Holden and the ceremony was performed by the girl's father, the Rev. Charles W. Holden of New Bedford.

Gordon was widely known in Newton society circles.

GIRLS WHO FIGHT BAN AGAINST KNICKERS

TWO OF NAHANT'S REBELS

These are two of the Nahant schoolgirls who are now campaigning to have the school ban of their wearing knickers to classes suspended. They are, left to right, Caroline Streeter and Geraldine Markee.

PROTEST BAN UPON KNICKERS

Lynn Girls to Join Those of Nahant Schools in Fight

"Where's your knicker button?"

"I haven't become a member yet."

"Then, pin this button on your coat," and another Knicker member is sworn into the students' "Anti-Skirt League," which holds its daily meetings in the yard of the Nahant Valley road school.

The girls are endeavoring to have suspended the recent rule made by Superintendent of Schools Lewis G. Nourse, forbidding girl students wearing knickers during school hours.

Incensed by the ban, they have started a paper in circulation among their parents, seeking approval of knickers, and are confident that their folks will acquiesce.

ORDERED HOME.

This little tempest in a teapot dates back to a few days ago, when Helen Coles, a member of the Junior High School, which is affiliated with the Valley road school, attended class, smartly togged up in tweed knickers and woolen stockings. Miss Mary Papineau, a teacher of Science and History, reprimanded the knicker student for her unconventional clothing, and ordered her to go to the principal's office where she was sent home to don a skirt.

On the following morning, nearly all her schoolmates appeared in class wearing knickers. On the next day, a notice was put up on the school bulletin board forbidding the wearing of knickers. It stated:

"After January 2, 1923, no girls will be allowed to wear knickers during school hours. Anyone violating this rule will be sent home at once. This rule has been made by the superintendent and the school committee."

SCHOOL HEAD FIRM.

The students became indignant. Geraldine Markee, Marguerite Markee and Caroline Streeter declared: "Why shouldn't we wear what we choose? Knickers are comfortable, and don't interfere when you run or play. We intend to work hard to reinstate the knicker fashion, and hope that Mr. Nourse will understand our viewpoint."

Superintendent Nourse said: "There is a place for everything and everything in its place has always been my motto, and I intend to enforce it. I positively will not allow any girl students to wear knickers in the classrooms, and the sooner they learn this the better off they will be. I have the co-operation of the school committee in this matter."

Principals of the Greater Lynn schools are in accord with Mr. Nourse's stand and are contemplating taking similar action in their schools. According to Principal Fred C. Mitchell of Lynn Classical, "golf trousers display a lack of judgment when worn by the girls during school hours."

Lynn students retort: "We shall see."

STORM ELOPERS RETURN HOME IN BLIZZARD

Marriages, ofttimes ary liable to be stormy affairs, but for real downright "stormishness" tie this one.

A week ago, at the height of a driving blizzard, Sarah Zanella, pretty leather worker of Woburn, disappeared in an auto with Baptiste Fhriscaldi, a fellow worker. The storm took them to its bosom and swallowed them up. All trace of them was lost.

Sarah's papa, Albert Zanella, of No. 57 Conn street, Woburn, searched in vain for his daughter, muttered dire threats against Baptiste and told the police to arrest him.

Today, out of the storm, and snow and blizzard the couple appeared.

"You people been hiding behind a fistful of snowflakes or something?" questioned Chief of Police McCauley to whom they first went on their return.

"Nope! smilingly declared Baptiste, "Sarah and I went to Gloucester and got married. We had gotten a license there a week before. We are home now and will go to Sarah's papa for his forgiveness."

WIFE NO. 3 WILL STAND BY HER ACCUSED MATE

The last and third it is alleged, wife of Stanley C. Parker, nee Webster, will stand by her much-married husband through his trial for polygamy, and, after the case is settled, welcome him back into their once happy home.

"If ever my husband needed my love and strength it is now," she said. "Not only for his own sake, but for the sake of our two little children, I am going to do everything in my power to help him."

Parker's case, which was to have come up today, was continued until January 11, after a clash between Attorney MacDonald, counsel for the defendant, and Attorney Gorman, for the State.

All during the session Mrs. Parker stood outside the courtroom, clinging to her husband's arm.

The case comes as the climax to Parker's amazing matrimonial adventures. Wife No. 2, the complainant, was Edna Gibson, formerly a dancer in a musical comedy, now living in the Back Bay.

Miss Gibson claims not only did Parker marry the present Mrs. Parker when he was already married to her, but also that his first wife is still living and not divorced.

Parker, whose real name is Webster, he says, was born in the Back Bay. He was graduated from Dartmouth College, and has a war record. When he was arrested, he was living in Concord, N. H.

Scene at Hearing in Brides' Case

Board Sitting on Charges Against Head of Local Veterans' Bureau

ACCUSED OFFICIAL AND MEN HEARING CASE

Board of Bureau officials sitting at trial of Dr. Arthur E. Brides, head of the local Veterans' Bureau, today. Back row, left to right, Attorney Leo I. Kelly, counsel for the board; George Hyland, Merle Sweet, secretary to the board. Front row, left to right, Colonel Charles R. Forbes, national director of the bureau, chairman of the board, and Colonel George Ijams. Inset is Dr. Arthur E. Brides.

2 NURSES TO DEFEND ACCUSED OFFICIAL

Head of Local Veterans' Bureau Springs Surprise at the Opening Hearing Today

Two young women nurses in the Boston office of the United States Veterans' Bureau will be witnesses at the hearing on charges of alleged misconduct and inefficiency against Dr. Arthur E. Brides, head of the local bureau, now under suspension.

The women are Miss Mary Banton and Miss Margaret Crawford. They were at the hearing today ready to testify. It was reported they will testify for Dr. Brides.

Colonel Charles R. Forbes, who is conducting the hearing, said most of the morning testimony was a "hearsay nature."

Hayward Mott, who filed the charges against Dr. Brides, was the first witness.

He was followed by E. L. Shubert, a training officer connected with the bureau. Captain William Blake, also connected with the bureau, was the third witness.

Dr. Brides today struck back at his accusers when he filed written charges with Colonel Charles R. Forbes, national director, against Captain William J. Blake and Dr. David J. Flanagan.

Captain Blake has been chief of the administration section and several times has been suggested by prominent veterans as successor to Dr. Brides.

CHARGES HELD SECRET.

Dr. Flanagan was the chief medical officer.

Both men are under suspension, imposed by Colonel Forbes immediately after his arrival here to conduct the Brides hearing.

No hint was given as to the nature of the accusations against Blake and Flanagan.

Colonel Forbes ruled that these charges could not be heard at this time but announced they would be weighed as soon as the hearing on the Brides charges was completed.

The trial board consists of Colonel Charles R. Forbes, presiding, Colonel George H. Ijams, chief engineer of district officers, and George Hyland of the Washington office of the bureau.

Nurse Mott objected at this action on the ground that he was a veteran and that he had been discriminated against.

FACED CHARGES BEFORE.

Captain Blake, it is said, had preferred charges against Dr. Brides to Director Forbes and also had notified the director that Mott was to do the same thing. Some time ago Flanagan was investigated on charges against Dr. Brides at a hearing in Washington on charges of alleged misconduct similar to those made by Mott.

Yesterday both Blake and Mott submitted affidavits to the effect that they were not personally interested in pressing charges against Dr. Brides, but would be willing to tell all they knew if summoned as witnesses.

Among the witnesses present today was John P. Higgins, a former employe of the office in the training section whose resignation, it is said, was requested by Dr. Brides during the recent political campaign in this city.

CANDIDATE FOR COUNCIL.

Higgins was a candidate for City Council. It was reported to Dr. Brides that boys in training, under the direction of Higgins, had been campaigning for him and this, it is believed, was the reason why Higgins left the service.

Among the other witnesses on hand were Patrolmen George F. Bergerson, Charles Hanky and Ray E. Varnum of Jamaica Plain station.

It is understood that one of the allegations against Dr. Brides is that he was arrested while on an auto party with another employe of the bureau and two other companions.

The following district superintendents were present ready to testify: Dr. David E. Harriman of Springfield, Allen Fletcher of Burlington, Vt., John Rooney of Worcester, Malcolm L. Stoddard of Portland and William J. Murphy of Boston.

COUE ARRIVES TO ESTABLISH U. S. CLINIC

New York, Jan. 4 (by International News Service).—M. Emile Coue internationally-famed apostle of auto suggestion, stepped ashore today on his first visit to America.

The chubby little former druggist whose "day by day" formula swept him from the obscurity of retirement in Nancy, France, into world prominence, disembarked in snow-clad Manhattan after a stormy voyage on the liner Majestic, delayed a day and a half.

Besieged by a hundred newspapermen, the little old man, with grey mustache, wavy Vandyke beard and shrewd blue eyes, appeared perplexed, but apparently eager to answer questions.

"I will not discuss the medical profession while I am in America," he said, "but it is my greatest desire to see auto-suggestion made part of the regular medical school program."

Addressed by one newspaper man as "Doctor," M. Coue immediately protested: "I am not Doctor. I am Monsieur. Please call me that. I do not treat. I help people to treat themselves."

He said he personally would conduct no clinics in America, that his purpose was to spread his teachings and methods in this country. He said a regularly authorized clinic would be instituted in New York.

M. Coue explained that his discovery of the value of the auto-suggestive method of improvement and treatment of diseases was made while he was studying hypnosis. He found auto hypnosis a powerful aid in overcoming ailments. "I do not invoke Divine aid in my treatments," he said. "But if a person has a strong religious faith it undoubtedly is an aid to them in treating themselves."

CHELSEA FORESTERS TO DANCE TOMORROW

Members of the city government have been invited, and it is expected that Senator Edward J. Cox and John F. Donovan will be present.

MINISTERS TO EXPOSE LAX DRY AGENTS

Rev. A. Z. Conrad, D.D., pastor of Park Street Church, will present a resolution which will bring out in the limelight, certain officials of this city who are alleged to be blocking the enforcement of the Volstead Act.

Attorney-General Allen, Harold D. Wilson, James P. Roberts and Evangellat W. H. Lyon, known as the "Bloody Shirt" evangelist, will be the speakers.

The meeting will rally the religious forces of this city and call upon all ministers and church members to stop the traffic in rum.

EXALTED RULER OF ELKS SCORES KLAN

Exalted Ruler Michael F. Cullinen of Boston Lodge of Elks scored the Ku Klux Klan before an audience of 250,000 persons scattered over a territory of more than 1,000,000 square miles, by means of the radio during the course of a special Elks' radio concert broadcasted from station WNAC. Shepard stores. He characterized the klan as an irresponsible organization that arrogated to itself the functions of government. He did not name the Ku Klux Klan openly, but there was no doubt as to his meaning.

3 RESCUED AT BLAZE IN WEST ROXBURY

Five people were driven into the streets today by a fire which destroyed a three-story wooden house at No. 6272 Washington street, West Roxbury.

Three children were carried to safety by their father, George Mansour, and Patrolman John E. Striplin. Their mother, Mrs. Victoria Mansour, was assisted to the street.

The blaze started in a small store on the first floor of the house and quickly swept upstairs. Mansour was aroused by a scorching blast of flame at his bedside. He led his wife into the street and dashed back through smoke with Patrolman Striplin and carried the children out. The children are aged six and four years and six months.

Mrs. Anna Corcoran, a next door at No. 5274 Washington street, also was driven out by smoke.

The fire was a stubborn one a time threatened one of which the family was given shelter.

WATCH FAILS TO RUN, AUCTIONEER FINED

Harry Pinasky, an auctioneer at No. 118 Canal street, sold a "17 jewel" watch to John D. MacInnis of Dwight street, Norwood, in October. When John got outside the store he wound it, but it refused to go. So John complained to the police. Pinansky was fined $50 by Judge Sullivan in Municipal Court. He appealed.

STANISLAUS ZBYSZKO BATTLES CANADIAN CHAMPION

GRAND OLD MAN RULES FAVORITE FOR BOUT

By JACK CONWAY

The Grand Old Man of the wrestling game will show why he has been able to conquer Father Time when he battles George Walker, Canadian champion, in the feature match at the Gil Howard's show at the Grand Opera House tonight.

Of course, Stanislaus Zbyszko is the Grand Old Man.

Despite his forty-two years, Zbyszko stands forth as one of the world's mightiest grapplers. He still retains hope of winning back the heavyweight championship from Strangler Lewis.

When these two men battled recently in St. Lewis the Strangler only won after a furious engagement.

"Next time I'll conquer," says Zbyszko. And many wrestling fans who have studied his brilliant career agree with him.

There are many wonder athletes — Jack Dempsey, Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, Pancho Villa and others have won for themselves lasting places in the Hall of Fame.

But when you go down the list of sporting celebrities there is one name that stands forth a little bit more prominently than the rest. It is that of Stanislaus Zbyszko.

Blessed with wonderful courage, a remarkable physique and a knowledge of the wrestling game possessed by few, Zbyszko has gone forth and conquered.

How will the Grand Old Man fare with Walker tonight?

Walker has beaten Jimmy Londos, Dick Daviscourt and other great stars. He is one of the few Irish wrestlers who has gained international prominence.

King George presented him with a medal as a tribute to his work on the mat.

Walker says he would rather defeat Stanislaus Zbyszko tonight than gain any other possible mat honor.

Possibly he will succeed.

Personally we are sticking close with the Grand Old Man. We figure he will keep out selections for the year at 1000 per cent.

There will be two bang-up preliminaries. Eddie Shaboo of the U. S. Ship Florida will oppose Kid Kilonis, Greek wrestling star, while Joe Perelli, Italian wildman, will have Tommy Record of Somerville as an opponent.

Quincy is to have a new boxing club. The shows will be staged in Music Hall which has accommodations for about 1,200 fans. The opening show will be held in about ten days and will find Billy Shiels and Phil Salvadore battling in the feature match on a winner-take-all basis.

Quincy business men have subscribed for the ringside seats for the entire season. All which should help to give the promoters a fighting chance.

Matchmaker Alex McLean of the Armory A. A. has given our local boxers a chance to show only to find they get inflated ideas of their own importance as drawing cards once they knock off a couple of duds.

There is only one major league attraction in New England. It is unnecessary to give his name.

Ten-thousand-dollar houses are not uncommon when this fighter shows in Boston against a high-class performer. For the benefit of some of our readers who may have just come to this part of the country we are referring to Eddie Shevlin.

If Willie Harmon keeps on winning he soon will be a tremendous attraction.

Twenty-eight straight for Harmon. Not so bad.

• • •

And the kid has only engaged in about thirty-six matches since he entered the ring.

AMATEUR BOXERS AT DILBOY POST

Tonight in K. of C. Hall, Somerville, the followers of the amateurs will witness one of the best cards ever offered.

Herb Cole.

around Greater Boston, when the Dilboy Post, V. F. W., stages its first tournament of the 1923 season. This organization has become a favorite with the amateurs in view of the good treatment accorded them and the caliber of the prizes awarded. And of the further fact that the funds received from the show are added to the relief fund of the post to take care of ex-service men and their families who are in needy circumstances.

The following classes will be contested: 112, 118, 133, 147 and 160 pounds. The committee is in receipt of entries from the cream of each class. One youngster, Young Duffy of Revere, who has been cleaning up everything in the 112-pound class, will be watched closely by the fans. The fans from the Magoun square section will turn out in large number to witness the debut of Frank "Bono" Lavendier, in the roped arena. The show will start promptly at 8 p. m.

MICKEY WALKER TO BOX LATZO

Mickey Walker.

Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, has been signed by Manager Jack Bulger to meet Pete Latzo in an eight-round bout at the Arena Club of Philadelphia on January 15. Latzo has given Eddie Shevlin, Paul Doyle and Dave Shade torrid engagements. Walker's heavy thumping power should gain for him the honors.

As no decisions are rendered in Philadelphia, Latzo will have to score a knockout or win on a foul to gain the title.

TORONTO BEATS HARVARD IN OVERTIME

Glorious even in defeat.

That just about explains the clash between Toronto and Harvard in which the former was returned the victor by the score of 7-6.

Laroque and Owen did most of the work for the Crimson, while Carson, Wasman and Hudson for Toronto duplicated their performances of the previous night.

Laroque, aided by Owen, brought the puck up to the Canadians' net and paved the way for a score, and immediately after put the disk in for the tying goal, and thereby forced the Canadians into their second overtime game in two successive nights.

But the Toronto representatives were undaunted, as within three minutes after the overtime period had been started, mainly through the efforts of Carson and Hudson scored three more goals as against none for Harvard.

George Owen's boys then came back, but the two goals made by Crosby and Laroque were not enough to tie or win the game. Westman put the disk in for another score before the final whistle blew.

FITZSIMMONS IS STILL HOPEFUL

Eddie Fitzsimmons, recently knocked out by Sailor Freedman at New York, will push his head above the front line trenches once more on January 16, when he quarrels with Charley (Kid) Murray of Ball more in a ten-round bout at the Olympic A. A. of, Harrisburg, Pa.

Eddie Fitzsimmons

Times were when Fitz was quite a thumper. His ring star began to set shortly after his act with Young Kloby at Lawrence.

Southpaw Eddie is still under the management of Dan Morgan. The latter has made a million berries with fighters, but couldn't keep his money.

Daniel is trying to build up his badly battered stable of boxers and has added Willie Farley, Yorkville flyweight, to his list. Villa has made the flyweight division popular.

CASEY TEAMS WILL BATTLE TOMORROW

Boston Council and Bunker Hill Council basketball teams will play their first game tomorrow night at Roxbury High School. Both teams are very popular with the fans and a fast game is expected.

These two teams have fought neck to neck for the championship in the K. of C. League for two seasons.

JUST ABOUT NOW

(Submitted by K. E. N., Back Bay.)

THIS is the time of mighty changes. It is verily the Winter of discontent for the hectic storekeeper. The annual post-Christmas drive of the females of the species has started. Young, old and indifferent are exchanging their Yuletide gifts. Frenzied shoppers, armed with what look like oversize wet wash bundles, board the cars at every corner, the light of battle in their gleaming eyes. It matters not that most of them got just what they wanted. The longing for change triumphs over all other instincts and they're at it again.

"SHAWMUT CASEYS WANT GAMES

Wm Carlson

The Shawmut Council Knights of Columbus basketball team, which is leading the K. of C. League with six wins and one defeat, is ready to meet any of the fast quintets in the State.

Wm Carlson, who is hailed about the fifth man as one of the best basket shooters, has been coaching the Kay Bee outfit. Since Carlson took charge the Knights have had fine success.

Games may be arranged with the Knights on dates not conflicting with the league schedule, by communicating with Manager Joseph Comanis, No. 46 Shirley street, Roxbury.

DARTMOUTH IN WIN AGAINST KNOX FIVE

Hanover, N. H., Jan. 4. — Dartmouth defeated the Eastern-touring Knox basketball team, 39 to 14. The Green had little trouble with the visitors after the first few minutes of play, although the game remained fast throughout.

Both teams presented a strong defence at the start and no baskets were shot during the first ten minutes of play. From then on the Green offence got going and scored regularly, while their defence remained impregnable throughout, all Knox scores were made on free trips or long shots.

Millar, veteran Dartmouth guard, and Friedman led the Dartmouth attack, and Cullen succeeded in nineteen out of twenty-three attempts from the foul line. Ludwick and Albro played well for Knox.

JOHNNY LEONARD BOXES STANTON

Johnny Leonard, one of Solly Snyder's fast steppers, has been booked to mingle with Willie Stanton of Bridgeport, Ct., in a ten-round quarrel at the Lake A. C. of Worcester next Tuesday night. Leonard has piled up a fine array of victories since he hop-scotched into Now England.

Puncho Pancho Villa has been obliged to call off his bout with Franklin Mason, billed for the Arena A. C. for next Monday night, on account of injuries. He has cancelled his meeting with Bud Taylor, booked for Providence.

The little Filipino injured his hands in his recent quarrel with Terry Martin in New York. He put his hands completely out of commission when he battled Battling Murray in Philadelphia a few nights later.

MELROSE HAS A LARGE SQUAD FOR HOCKEY

By FRED L. LANE.

Melrose High, for years a leader among Massachusetts schools in hockey, will equal if not surpass all records if the judgment of Coach George McPheter can be taken.

The Melrose mentor, who has coached the puck chasers for three years, is elated with the work of the candidates and feels certain that the septet will add honors to the school in this sport.

The boys practiced for three weeks on the Ell rink and up to the recent thaw made great progress. Blackboard drill is indulged in when it is impossible to work out doors.

Only One of Last Year's Winning Six Lost

Only one of last year's winning combination is lost. Dale, a fine skater and clever stick artist, is missing. He played a defence position.

Joseph Doucette, a former Boston College High star, considered by many to be the leading forward in schoolboy circles, has joined the team. The acquisition will give Melrose a fine line.

Captain Crocker Gardner, right wing, and Kenneth Marshall, centre ice, make Melrose stand out in the first defence. There is a possibility that "Lee" Harrington will be shifted to right wing and Captain Gardner used as a defence player. The squad, which numbered fifty, has been cut to twenty-five. In addition to the usual number of new candidates there are four other letter men on the squad. Alvah Wilbur, defence; Roy Milliken, defence; Art Kimball, goal; Warren Taylor, wing, and John Lane, centre, give the team a strong sub list that can fill any vacancy during a game.

Coach Joyce Back in Harness After Illness

Coach William Joyce of Lynn Classical High is back in harness after the track and basketball teams after a severe illness. He has been ailing since the close of the football season, but feels fit after the rest.

Coach Jack Burke has resigned as coach at Gloucester High School. It is said that "Doc" Andrews, former Tufts star, will coach the baseball and basketball teams.

Dorchester High, fresh after its victory over Boston Trade, Saturday, will play Arlington High on Spy Pond, Arlington, today.

Everett High has adopted basketball for its Winter sport. Coach Brickley is now working out the forty-five candidates at the Parlin School hall.

JOHNNY DUNDEE TO MEET VICTOR

New York, Jan. 4. — Announcement was made by the garden that Johnny Dundee, the ight lightweight champion, has agreed to defend his title against the winner of the Jack Bernstein-Pepper Martin twelve-round scrap, which is to be decided in the big amphitheatre tomorrow evening.

Meantime, both principals are getting in shape for the important contest. Bernstein's injured right hand is reported to have completely mended and he expects to experience no trouble with it when he meets the Brooklyn-er. Martin realizes he will have to whip the Yonkers lad if he expects to keep in the pugilistic limelight.

Dundee intended to box Sailor Byron at a Boston club, but Byron got beaten by Solly Green, which spoiled the party.

GIRLS SHOULD NOT BE SHY AT ENTERING GOLD SKATES RACE

HAVE EQUAL CHANCES TO WIN PRIZES

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

The girls and young women already entered in the GOLD SKATES RACES are clamoring for competition.

There will be just as many prizes and fully as much enjoyment for the girls in the GOLD SKATES RACES as there will be for the boys, but to date you would never guess it from the number of feminine skaters who have entered the lists.

"Why don't more of the girls and young women enter the GOLD SKATES RACES?" queries one young woman who filed her entry blank this morning. "At my playground there are almost as many girl skaters as there are boys, and yet thus far I am the only one entered in my class. I think I'll urge every girl I know to enter the races, for I know it's going to be lots of fun, and that every girl and young woman will have an equal chance of reaching the finals and winning the prizes. Certainly I can't race all by myself."

Perhaps all the feminine skaters of this section are not fully aware of the provision made for them in the approaching ice-skating derby.

All ages are provided for. There will be races for those under fourteen years of age; races for those fourteen to sixteen years of age and for those sixteen to eighteen years of age, and for those over eighteen years of age, and to the ultimate winner in each class will be awarded a pair of GOLD SKATES AND SKATING BOOTS, while to those finishing second on the finals will be awarded SILVER SKATES AND SKATING BOOTS. Prior to competing in the finals they may win certificates showing them to be the girl champions of their nearest playground or pond, or the champions of the section of the city in which they reside.

Every Girl Skater Should Enter Races

And those in charge of Greater Boston's First Annual Ice Skating Derby—the GOLD SKATES RACES—want every girl skater in Greater Boston entered in the events.

Consequently, if you have not yet forwarded your entry blank do so at once.

The GOLD SKATES EDITOR has received a number of letters and entry blanks from skaters residing outside the Greater Boston District. Framingham, Foxboro, Wrentham, Springfield, Worcester and Providence young people have sought to enter the races. Unfortunately for those who have applied from those cities and towns, the races this year are confined to the Greater Boston District, and those living so far away from Boston cannot be handled. It is possible the races next year may be conducted in all parts of the State, but this year the GOLD SKATES RACES plan only covers Boston and its immediate suburbs.

The entries received today were.

Medbury Says a Business Man's Secretary Shows If He Is Married

By John P. Medbury.

THERE'S no such a thing any more as a stenographer. The secretary is equal to a chauffeur as a matrimonial asset. You said her a mouthful.

EMPLOYING [illegible] saves money, [illegible] it saves [illegible].

A SECRETARY [illegible] knows how to [illegible] you [illegible] at the [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible] her out to [illegible] a lot in it.

HER motto is: My boss may be a [illegible] but he's right [illegible] when it comes to the pay who pays me my salary."

ONE of [illegible] gives all of her [illegible] for her employer.

SHE'S his confidential secretary. He tells her everything he thinks she ought to know.

A SECRETARY is usually right in the same office and most of them are next to the head [illegible] few of them will [illegible] away.

YOU never have to wonder whether an employer is married or not. Just take a look at his secretary.

IF she's pretty, he's either single or his wife's out of town.

A WIFE has a right to be afraid of secretaries. A good many wives were secretaries before they got married.

IN [illegible] dame knew so much about her employer that he had to marry her so he could tell her to stop.

ANOTHER guy had a secretary whom he couldn't fire and she was [illegible] so he had to marry her to get rid of her.

NOW he has a homely [illegible] working for him as his wife is very suspicious. Any girl is [illegible] as long as she is [illegible].

NO wonder so many men join [illegible].

THE only things a wife wants her husband to keep to himself are his feelings about the bills that she runs up.

SOME secretaries are married women and if your wife isn't jealous of her her husband is jealous of you.

THE best thing to do is hire a man and keep peace in both families.

ARE YOU SLIGHTING THE LITTLE OPPORTUNITIES?

You have been letting a lot of little things slip which might have benefited you greatly, waiting for the big opportunity.

The man who gave you a chance to benefit by a small opportunity which you failed to grasp is not going to be a booster for you on a larger field of opportunity.

You may never get the opportunity you desire.

Better take the little ones as fast as they come and make them stepping stones to larger ones.

Most little chances lead to something a little better.

You are getting yourself in line for bigger things every time you grasp something better than you have.

You are bound to learn a lot yourself through the little job especially if it be a step higher.

It is learning the foundations better than anyone else that makes the big man a position unassailable.

You cannot learn too much, so get it step by step rather than to jump into a place too big for you and end in ignominious failure.

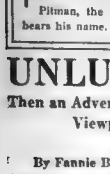
UNLUCKY ATCARDS

Then an Adventure Befell Her Which Changed Her Viewpoint and Gave Her a Lover and a Husband

By Fannie B. Linsky

"TWO in spades," said Sheila West's high pitch voice, and the muscles about her mouth became suddenly tense. She knew she had no business to be playing bridge again. Geoffrey had warned her only last evening that they simply must cut down expenses. "Two no trump." Eileen O'Hara's cold, scornful voice rang triumphant as she took the bid away. "Yours," said the other three, and once more the game was on.



But it was a very chastened Sheila who left the Davenant's beautiful home later that afternoon. Refusing all offers of a "lift" in any of the luxurious cars that called for the other members of the Thursday Bridge Club, she set out for the modest kitchenette apartment where she kept house for her brother Geoffrey.

A sudden bump sent her reeling against the side of a nearby building. For a moment the girl did not know what had struck her, and sensing for breath she leaned weakly against the wall. As she did so, there loomed before her eyes, a large masculine figure, running as though for dear life, and fast disappearing down the street. Sheila watched him resentfully.

Directly at her feet lay a man's wallet, the black leather scratched and mud-stained where she had stepped on it in her unwonted ous stumble against the building. She raised and picked it up, and hurried on her way to the little apartment, fearful lest her brother reach home before her.

She bent eagerly to the contents of her find. Three brand new ten dollar bills crackled in her fingers. Her brides debt! The thought flashed across her mind instantly. Now she could pay that detestable Kileen O Hare without going to Geoffrey.

However, one glance at her brother's face when he came in a little later drove all thought of her recent adventure from her mind. She went quickly towards him. "What's wrong, Geoff" she cried. "You look worried to death. Tell me, has anything happened?"

"Oh, poor Luke Hawley had bad news from home this afternoon, and what with all of us trying to help him we only made matters worse."

"That nice Mr. Hawley that was up here to dinner one night?" asked Sheila. Geoff nodded

"Well, Hawley doesn't get a very big salary, and of course it has cost him a lot to take care of his wife; so the boys in the office got together and collected some money for him. He had only twenty minutes to make the train, so they didn't say a word to him, but I took his wallet out of his coat pocket when he wasn't looking, and we slipped three brand new ten-dollar bills into it."

"Three ten dollar bills!" Sheila sat up with a jerk

Well, to make a long story short, in the general hubbub of getting off, we forgot to put the wallet back, and Luke went off without a cent."

"Oh," said Sheila weakly, "how awful!"

"Stephen Grainger, our Western man, just happened to come in this morning. He's an old time college track man with about six feet of length to him, so he volunteered to make a run to the station and try and reach Luke before his train pulled out."

"How very strange," murmured Sheila, a funny little twirl to be gurgling to dance in her brown eyes.

If her brother went to answer the ring at the door, and instead of completing her sentence, Sheila found herself acknowledging an introduction to Stephen Grainger, and decided that he had the pleasantest brown eyes of any man of her acquaintance.

"What sort of girl was it you bumped into?" Sheila's voice was suspiciously meek.

"To tell the truth," answered Grainger, "I really didn't get a look at her. She certainly must have thought I was a brute because I was in such a dead rush. I never even stopped to find out if I had hurt her. I'd give a whole lot to see her again, though. I'll bet she could tell me something about that wallet."

"I'll bet she could, too," said Sheila emphatically, and again the little twinkle danced in her eye. The two men looked at her in astonishment. "The question is—" she paused dramatically—"just what would you really give to see her again?"

"Fifty dollars," said Grainger promptly

"There" said Sheila, and held out the wallet

Sisters All

DRAWN BY POPINI

SOMEWHERE in the back of every one's mind—or is it heart?—there lies that realization, dream, hope, or wish which first found expression in dim ages past in that best-beloved of all tales—Cinderella. And each year since King Cophetua met the beggar maid and, smitten by her loveliness, became a beggar for her love to make her Queen, countless stories of printed page and stage have told the wondrous new story.

News? Of course! For though ancient as the first rising of the primal moon o'er Eden, the miracle of love is ever wondrously new. But—strange as it might seem to the inhabitant of another planet—we maids and men of this old Earth somehow get our greatest thrill when love comes to those whose lives and ways present the greatest contrast

There's the demure little dimpling maid whose gentle voice and comfy ways win the hearts of all she serves so sweetly— The stenographer with pencil carelessly, yet so artfully, thrust into hair of gleaming gold, whose eyes, ah, me!— The student, daintily swinging down the campus, off to class in cap and gown, laden with weighty tomes, but not so preoccupied by ponderous thoughts that, ah, her eyes!—The farmerette, swinging a late though industrious rake, striding through stubble and the last-fallen leaves in sturdy boots and overalls, ah, the witching of her face and the magic of her voice hailoing o'er the hills— And, then, the girl who has so much of everything, riches, adulation, amusement to satiety, frocks so gorgeous they even cause "Society" to envy, but whose heart passes by the "gilded boys" to fall upon its knees before a youth who can give her only love!

ONLY love! What more can life bestow? But here they are—sisters all—the girls you meet for fleeting seconds and mayhap pass by—which will YOU choose, oh, Mr. Man, when your heart and hearth clamor for a mate?—POPINI.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

Ralph Lacy Asks Anne for the Letter of Introduction That Her Husband Gave Rosa Cordova as Part of Evidence

By Ann Lisle

"I HAVE plenty on West—to help you send him up the river for the balance of several ordinary years," commented Mr Lacy crisply "Keep all the secrets that aren't yours. No use asking other folk to treat me. I might sacrifice them—for you. You wouldn't?" I asked "But that doesn't give me the right to tell anything that doesn't chiefly concern Jim and me."

Then Mr. Lacy astonished me by getting abruptly to his feet and striding to the other end of the sun parlor. He stood for several minutes with his back to me and his head bowed as if he were concentrating to the point where he must shut out every disturbing influence—except the soft radiance of the moon which had swum up into sight in a velvet sky.

At last he turned and marched toward me, with a peculiar effect of forcing himself to what he had to do and say. Abruptly he came to a stand just in front of my chair. But after a moment, he laughed shortly and flung himself as abruptly into the place he had just left. Then he held out his pipe as if asking approval, and on my nod began filling it in a silence fraught with some unex pressed thought. At last he lighted his pipe and took a deep puff or two. Then he laid the pipe on the ash stand, clasped his hands loosely in front of him and musing with the boyish and engaging candor which reminded me so strongly of Neal, he asked very gently:

"How much do you know of Mrs. Cordova's movements from the time she arrived in the country to the time you met her?"

"She came to Jim's office the day she arrived, I presume. She had a letter to Virginia Dalton, and the next thing I know of her doing was to get to Pet with it the afternoon of the day I met her. She couldn't get Virginia on the telephone and she didn't want to stay alone at a hotel."

"Mrs. Harrison—forgive me—I may seem like a prosecuting attorney or a witness. But I must ask. Did Mrs. Cordova bring a letter to —your husband's sister and—none to you?" jerked out Ralph Lacy.

"Oh, no," I agreed, strangely relieved that I could answer this way. "Mine came later."

"I plan—"

"By mail," I explained.

"Have you that letter?", Ralph Lacy questioned

For a moment I could not bring myself to answer.

"Have I my husband's letter of introduction—the one he gave Rosa for me?" I stammered, searching my mind for a way out of a situation I was suddenly afraid to face. Then, realizing that my faith in Ralph Lacy must not fall at the first test, I went on with quiet assurance: "Yes, I have it. Do you want to see it?"

"The envelope, please," he replied.

"Shall I run upstairs and get it now?"

"Please do. I hate to trouble you, but we must get all the evidence we have in order, if we want to go on with our case wisely and well."

"I'll get it," I said calmly, adding on a forced note of lightness: "You might light another of those pipefuls while waiting. Then my hostess instinct won't make me nervous if it takes a minute or two to rout the document out of my desk."

"Take your time, Mrs. Harrison. Sherlock will light his pipe and draw on it in temporary solitude for ideas," smiled Mr. Lacy, with something in his manner that made me feel as if I were a child in the Dock West snarl were on the point of being knotted beyond further unraveling

I hurried upstairs, ran to my desk and found the letter which had come to me after Rosa's arrival, and then—though I had a bitter memory of how the letter had hurt me—I sat down and read it again. With the warming memory of Jim's latest letter to Indiana me, his letter introducing Rosa had no great power to wound Seen in different perspective it made me feel that Jim had written it with an urgent desire to help me to a quick and clear understanding of the woman he was sending to help me, as well as himself in managing his affairs Phrases of the letter struck me with particular force. I stowed them carefully in my mind with the feeling that they would help Mr. Lacy and me clarify the situation. But I did not want to read the letter to him. It is from Jim to me. Mechanically, I took the letter from the envelope and laid it back in the little drawer of my desk where I keep the letters—all too few—which I have had from Jim on this long trip of his.

Who Occupies a Unique Position in the Writing World as an Authority on the Problems of Girls.

ALICE belongs to a group of girls all of whom have more worldly goods than she. One of her chums has great wealth, another has beauty as well as wealth, and Alice has gradually to add to the riches her father dowers her with, and the fourth has just made a brilliant marriage

Alice has a splendid position She earns twenty-six hundred dollars a year and has no one dependent on her for support But the fifty dollars a week which might seem as much to another girl is little indeed measured in terms of the country houses and automobiles and smart apartments of Alice's friends. Sometimes she said to me the other day:

"I don't see how Alice May keeps up with the crowd she does with She must be a regular little parasite—taking everything and giving nothing. I'll bet all her pretty clothes come from some of her friends' cast-off garment bags. I'll wager she grabs about every dinner and never pays a taxi fare when she can get one of her pals to send a car for her I tell you that girl is a grafter for fair and I know it."

"A grafter," I repeated "Isn't there any way of keeping up your end of things around in terms of dinners and auto rides and week-ends at country homes? Now I happen to know that Alice May gives her friends things far more important than the worldly benefits they can heap upon her without any cost to themselves. She gives sympathy, understanding, loyalty, help in the problems we all have to face, her time, herself"

"Yes"— smiled my informant serenely "I daresay But she is a grafter all the same and every one thinks so. That's what a girl gets when she travels around with a millionaire bunch on a fifty-a-week salary."

Nor could she be moved from her position. She went right on insisting that everybody knows that when a poor girl travels with a rich set she has to keep up and the only way to do it is to be a little sister of the rich and take the crumbs that fall from the table

If any of you have tried going about with folks who have a lot more money than you have you know the struggle there is to do the things they do, to look the way they do, to pay your way in some coin of your realm and to keep up appearances so you won't stand out as the poor relation

Yet why should friendships be measured in terms of what one can afford and what another can not? Chiefly because we all grow accustomed to living on the scale we can afford. And when we glimpse things beyond our means we admire them and pass by. But when we are brought in constant contact with the rich and the luxurious we do not glance and wave them aside as out of our reach We are likely to begin contriving and planning to own what seems taken for granted by every one else we know

WHO SAID IT AND WHERE

"Second thoughts are the best." We all know by experience Dryden was right when he wrote those words in his play, "The Spanish Friar."

"Liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable."

In Daniel Webster's second reply to Hayne, delivered before Congress in January, 1830, we find this thoroughly American sentiment.

"Cleanliness is Next to Godliness."

John Wesley proclaimed this truth in a sermon on "Dress."

"Birds of a Feather Flock Together."

This phrase, which is a commonplace with us, is found in the "Anatomy of Melancholy" by Robert Burton (1576-1640).

WHEN DID IT HAPPEN!

1—When did the famous ride of Paul Revere take place?

2—When was the statue of Venus de Milo, now in the Louvre, Paris, discovered?

3—When was the "House of Seven Gables" published?

4—When did Herod reign as King of Judea?

5—When was macadamizing invented?

When was the patriotic song "Hail, Columbia," written?

7—When did the famous Irish Potato Famine occur?

8—When was the arch at Washington Square, New York City, erected?

9—When was Ulysses S. Grant President of the United States?

10—When was the Phi Beta Kappa Society founded?

Answers to these queries will be printed tomorrow.

Different Aspects

The professor was putting the finishing touches to his new concrete pathway.

Jimmy, aged six, had been watching the proceedings with great interest, and at length, deeming the time had come for trial, started to cross before the mixture was dry. When the professor displayed his just anger, a neighbor observed.

"Why, professor, I thought you liked children."

"So I do, in the abstract," the professor replied, "but not in the concrete."

LAND O' DREAMS

NEW SERIES BY NOTED PSYCHO-ANALYST

By Hereward Carrington, Ph. D.

Writer of Wide Repute and Author of Books on Psycho-Analysis.

IT has been said that almost every person has dreamed, at one time or another, some or all of the following dreams. It is remarkable, in a way, that so many people should dream the same dreams, and yet they do, and I think my reader will agree that he, too, has experienced such dreams when he reads over the following list of the so-called "Seven Common Dreams" They are

1—The falling dream.

2—The flying dream

3—The dream of inadequate clothing.

4—The dream of not being able to get away from some beast or injurious person or thing that is pursuing.

5—The dream of being drawn irresistibly to some dangerous place

6—The dream that some darling wish has been gratified

7—The dream of being about to go on a journey, and being unable to get your things into your trunks, etc.

These dreams are very frequent;

TELL THIS AT DINNER

A meek-looking individual, with a surgical bandage around his brow, a black eye, and a long scratch down his cheek, walked into a provincial newspaper office

"You have some professional humorists working on your linotype machines?" he asked a subeditor.

The sub's reply was a haughty stare.

"Do you read your own paper?" went on the small, inquiring voice.

"Occasionally."

"Did you read my poem entitled 'To Cynthia,' in your last issue?"

"Er—I'm afraid—"

"I thought not. In that poem I wrote a line that read: 'I love you better than I love my life.'"

"Yes? A very neat line."

"And one of your linotype operators changed it: 'I love you better than I love my wife.' I'm a married man, and my wife read it. And—and—well, look at my face!"

An English clergyman recalls one occasion when it fell to his lot to marry his footman to his cook. The footman would persist throughout the service in patting his finger to his forehead every time his master addressed him. The reverend gentleman remonstrated in an undertone. "Don't touch your forehead, Martin, but say the words after me."

Then aloud: "Wilt thou take this woman to be thy wedded wife?" Martin, bearing in mind his master's hint, "After you, sir," had a letter to Virginia Dalton, and the next thing I know of her doing was to get to Pet with it the afternoon of the day I met her. She couldn't get Virginia on the telephone and she didn't want to stay alone at a hotel."

"Mrs. Harrison—forgive me—I may seem like a prosecuting attorney or a witness. But I must ask. Did Mrs. Cordova bring a letter to —your husband's sister and—none to you?" jerked out Ralph Lacy.

"Oh, no," I agreed, strangely relieved that I could answer this way. "Mine came later."

"I plan—"

"By mail," I explained.

"Have you that letter?", Ralph Lacy questioned

For a moment I could not bring myself to answer.

"Have I my husband's letter of introduction—the one he gave Rosa for me?" I stammered, searching my mind for a way out of a situation I was suddenly afraid to face. Then, realizing that my faith in Ralph Lacy must not fail at the first test, I went on with quiet assurance: "Yes, I have it. Do you want to see it?"

"The envelope, please," he replied.

"Shall I run upstairs and get it now?"

"Please do. I hate to trouble you, but we must get all the evidence we have in order, if we want to go on with our case wisely and well."

"I'll get it," I said calmly, adding on a forced note of lightness: "You might light another of those pipefuls while waiting. Then my hostess instinct won't make me nervous if it takes a minute or two to rout the document out of my desk."

"Take your time, Mrs. Harrison. Sherlock will light his pipe and draw on it in temporary solitude for ideas," smiled Mr. Lacy, with something in his manner that made me feel as if I were a child in the Dock West snarl were on the point of being knotted beyond further unraveling

I hurried upstairs, ran to my desk and found the letter which had come to me after Rosa's arrival, and then—though I had a bitter memory of how the letter had hurt me—I sat down and read it again. With the warming memory of Jim's latest letter to Indiana me, his letter introducing Rosa had no great power to wound Seen in different perspective it made me feel that Jim had written it with an urgent desire to help me to a quick and clear understanding of the woman he was sending to help me, as well as himself in managing his affairs Phrases of the letter struck me with particular force. I stowed them carefully in my mind with the feeling that they would help Mr. Lacy and me clarify the situation. But I did not want to read the letter to him. It is from Jim to me. Mechanically, I took the letter from the envelope and laid it back in the little drawer of my desk where I keep the letters—all too few—which I have had from Jim on this long trip of his.

THE PRIDE OF PALOMAR By PETER B. KYNE

An Engrossing Story of Southern California by the Author of "Kindred of the Dust"

Struggle of the Last of an Ancient Line to Save Estate From Hands of Japanese

START THIS NEW STORY TODAY

The story opens on the Rancho Palomar, an extensive tract in Southern California. It is the estate of the Farrels, an ancient California family dating back to the days of the Spanish conquistadores, and enlivened with a dash of Irish.

Old Don Miguel Farrel, alone on the heavily mortgaged rancho with only his last faithful retainer, Pablo Arteian, and the latter's expansive wife, receives a telegram from the War Department at Washington announcing the death in battle in Siberia of his only son, "Don Mike."

False news, as the subsequent scene at the Presidio army fields show where "Don Mike" is mustered out of the service. On the train, homeward bound, he encounters a party of three—an overbearing, wealthy Japanese, a prosperous-appearing American with a down-East accent, and the latter's beautiful daughter. He has dinner with the daughter. Don Mike leaves the train at Gespe and walks home, discovering the grave of his father. Kay Parker arrives at the ranch and tells Pablo Don Mike is not dead. Don Mike arrives and takes charge. He tells the Parkers they may stay as his guests. Don Mike meets his father's enemy and thrashes him. He then drives with Kay to El Toro to attach Loustalot's bank account on an old debt of Don Miguel's. Farrel and the Parkers ride out to see the building of the dam. On the way a panther is chased and roped by Don Mike.

Mr. Parker and Bill Conway discuss continuing the work on the dam

It is a Cosmopolitan Production, direction of Frank Borzage, and featuring Forrest Stanley and Marjorie Daw. It is released as a Paramount picture.

"As is" Conway demanded, surveying his rusty old business suit and hard, soiled hands.

"'As is,' Bill."

"Final Well, we've come to a complete understanding without flailing out over it haven't we?" he demanded of Kay Parker and his motor car. "With malice toward none and justice toward all—or words to that effect. Eh?"

"Oh, get back into your office, Conway, and cast up the account against me. Figure a full day for the men and the mules, although our break came at half-past three. I'm a contrary man, but I'm not small. Come on, Mr. Farrel—let's go home," Parker suggested.

"Little birds in their nest should agree," old Conway warned, as, with a sweep of his battered old hat to the ladies, he turned to reenter his office. With a nod of farewell, John Parker and his wife started riding down the draw while Farrel turned to unhouse his saddle-girth and adjust the heavy stock-saddle on the pinto's back. While he was thus engaged, Kay rode up to the door of Conway's rough little office, bent down from Panchito, and peered in.

"Bill Conway?" she called softly.

Bill Conway came to the door.

"What's the big idea, Miss Parker?"

The girl glanced around and saw that Don Mike was busy with the ladigo, so she leaned down, dropped her arm around the astounded Conway's neck and implanted on his ruddy, bristling cheek a kiss as soft—so Bill Conway afterward described it—as grass hair.

"You build that dam," she whispered, blushing furiously, "and see to it that it's a good dam and will hold water for years. I'm the reserve in the battle—understand? When you need money, see me, but oh, please do not tell Don Mike about it. I'd die of shame."

She whirled Panchito and galloped down the draw, with Miguel Farrel loping along behind her, while, from the door of his shack of an office, old Bill Conway looked after them and thoughtfully rubbed a certain spot on his cheek. Long after the young folks had disappeared round the base of El Palomar, he continued to gaze courteous bowing, his respectful bow to Mrs. Parker and the solemnity with which he spoke impressed them with the conviction that this curious human study in light and shadow regarded their approval as an honor, not a privilege.

"I shall take very good care of Miss Kay," he supplemented. "She shall be home for dinner."

He mounted the gray gelding, leaving Pablo to follow with the black mare and the pinto, while he and Kay cantered down the wide white wash of the Rio San Gregorio.

From their semi-concealment among the young willow growth, scrub cattle gazed at them or fled, with tails aloft, for more distant thickets; cottontail rabbits and an occasional jack-rabbit, venturing forth as the shadows grew long in the valley, flashed through the low sage and weeds; from the purpling hillsides cock quails called cheerily to their families to come right home. The air was still and cool, heavy with the perfume of sage, blackberry briars, yerba santa, an occasional bay tree and the pungent odor of moist earth and decaying vegetation. There had fallen upon the land that atmosphere of serenity, of peace, that is the peculiar property of California's foothill valleys in the late afternoon; the world seemed very distant and not at all desirable, and to Kay there came a sudden, keen realization of how this man beside her must love this darkling valley with the hills above presenting their flower-clad breasts to the long spears of light from the dying day.

Don Mike had caught the spirit of the little chorister of his hidden valley, she heard him singing softly in rather a pleasing baritone voice:

Pienso en ti, Teresita mia,
Cuando la luna alumbra in tierra
Mi sentido al fuego de tus ojos,
Mi sencillo las penas del amor.

ADVICE TO LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Expensive Gifts

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of twenty-two and have been going about with a man three years my senior for the past three years. He has frequently declared his love for me and I love him.

Now, his young man is very jealous, and doesn't want me to have any friends, either girls or men. He does not want me to go out with anyone but himself, all of which I have agreed to do. He has given me expensive presents, such as two diamond rings, lavalliere diamond, a wrist watch, etc.

Now, with all these manifestations of love he has not once proposed marriage.

I live with strangers, having no father or mother, and very naturally I am longing for a home of my own. This young man's character is excellent and he is respectful in every way.

L. B.

First of all, you should not accept expensive gifts from a man to whom you are not engaged. The mere fact that you let him give you diamonds puts you in an equivocal position. When a man insists that a girl give up all her friends and that he is taking a possessive attitude to which he has no right, even if he does plan to marry her. You ought to be clever and tactful enough to find out why he wants you to give up all your friends. In a case such as yours a girl cannot sit and wait indefinitely. If he loves you honestly and honorably, you should know it, and if he is only amusing himself with you—you might as well know it.

Misplaced Admiration

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen, and considered attractive. There is only one man I care for, and I love him desperately. But he is married. He has promised to get a divorce and marry me, but he has never done so. I know that it is impossible for me to have him up, as he has a large place in my heart. Please advise me what to do.

M. C.

If this man did get a divorce to marry you, how could you ever have any faith or confidence in him? Your vanity has led you into a position where you are destroying the home of a man, breaking up another woman's home and making yourself miserable over "the moon" which you cannot have and probably would not want if it were attainable.

The Vanished Lover

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty and love a young man six months my senior who I know loves me.

He has been coming to see me every week for a year until three months ago, when he suddenly stopped. I haven't seen or heard from him since. What do you think can be the matter? I haven't done anything to hurt his feelings, so why should he stop without an explanation?

A. L.

Reasonable folks don't cut off friendship abruptly without a reason which seems adequate to them. Why shouldn't you write a friendly little note and ask if something is wrong? This is merely a kind and thoughtful thing to do and is in no way humiliating or degrading. You wouldn't hesitate to treat a girl with consideration and thoughtfulness. The man in the case may be ill or in trouble. Why not give him the benefit of the doubt?

Meeting His Friends

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going about with a young man a year and have consented to become engaged to him Christmas. I have never been introduced to any of his people. My parents say I shouldn't become engaged to him until I meet them, as it is odd that he doesn't ask me to. I don't know what to do, as I don't know if it would be proper for me to ask him to come, but rather the invitation came directly from him.

MAY.

If you feel closely enough in accord with a man to marry him, you certainly should not hesitate to be frank with him. Don't let pride or an exaggerated sense of delicacy prevent you from telling him just how you feel in this situation. He may be thoughtless or feel that he wants you to wait until your betrothal is announced before having you meet his family. But whatever is the trouble can be adjusted by honesty on your part.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Decanters are best cleaned by filling with strips of brown paper and cold water. They should be quite full. Shake the paper about and leave for a time. Then empty.

* * *

To make the most of the juices in a fowl, turn it on its breast instead of its back when roasting. The juices will then run into the breast, keeping it deliciously moist.

A sponge may be prevented from becoming slimy by washing occasionally in warm water to which has been added a little tartaric acid; afterward rinse in clear water.

* * *

Tinned foods should be chosen with care. Reject any which bulge, as this is a sign of fermentation, and rusty tins denote age, or storage in a damp place, so should be avoided.

WASTE HOME EFFORT

—By Loretto C. Lynch—

THERE is a stupendous amount of waste in effort in the households I have seen, and it seems such a pity, when the nation's most valuable asset is the happy, healthful comfortable home. To get at the root of the matter, I believe that too many housekeepers are trying to set up establishments in keeping with what those mythical things "the neighbors" think they should have. And having acquired an establishment in keeping with what they think the neighbors think they ought to have they then try to do the work of several trained servants.

Many households in our land are entirely too elaborate to be in keeping with the occupations and manner of living of the occupants. Great effort is wasted. The housewife works constantly and climbs that necessary thing called rest and the other essential known as recreation. The result is a maddening dissatisfaction with being a "household drudge."

The greatest geniuses in the world tell us that despite their extraordinary gifts, to accomplish anything even while they have had to systematize their lives and their work and give a definite time to each thing.

The other evening I called on a wife who was bemoaning her fate. She told me that in order to keep her four-room home and three children properly, it was necessary for her to arise at 6 and keep on going until shortly before midnight. Even while I spoke to her, she was performing the feat of a Proven handdress up other children's clothes.

"Why don't you make the kiddies some clothes of pretty dark Japanese crepe that requires no ironing?" I suggested.

"Why all the neighbors would talk about how I was neglecting the children, and I could not stand that," she same back wearily.

"But you could put a glass top over your dining table and use one whitetable cover indefinitely instead of those three table cloths a week you are ironing."

"My family is just as good as any family!"

Then the woman who gloried in her martyrdom told me how she went to the baker's every morning to get the rolls and then, the breakfast over, she did the marketing for the day. She never bought anything in quantity enough forlove or three days BECAUSE NONE ELSE IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD DID.

Just which hospital is to get her I do not know, but every time my telephone rings I expect to learn the name if the hospital. In the meantime I am wondering just which neighbors to whose opinions she has been such a loyal slave will come and keep her elaborate household going while her exhausted frame is being repaired.

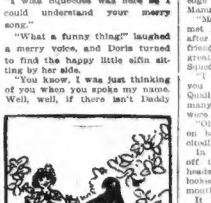
Doris Finds a Happy Family

DORIS sat very quietly for fear of frightening away the dear little bird perching on the fence rail and piping his merry little "Ah, Bob! Bob! White!"

"Oh, you dear!" Doris mused. "I wish Squeedee was here so I could understand your merry song."

"What a funny thing!" laughed a merry voice, and Doris turned to find the happy little elfin sitting by her side.

"You know, I was just thinking of you when you spoke my name. Well, well, if there isn't Daddy



"Oh, You Dear!"

Quail." And he whistled at the top of his voice: "Hello there, Daddy Quail! It's a wonder you wouldn't see your friends."

Daddy Quail turned around at the sound of the voice. When he spied Squeedee he flew down to a bush and tipped his little black head merrily.

"Well, if it isn't my old friend, Squeedee. Who's your friend?" Daddy Quail nodded and bowed to Doris. "I've been watching her out of the corner of my eye. I thought maybe she had come down to find my nest."

"Goodness, no!" laughed Squeedee. "Why, Doris is the best friend you birds have. By the way, how's the family? Every one well?"

"Sure enough," replied Daddy Quail. "Even Mama Quail says she never had so fine a brood in all her life as the last ones. Have you seen them, Miss Doris?"

"No, indeed. I've never seen them," Doris laughed. "But I've heard you singing a good many times out in the woods here, and I've often wondered why you were so happy. I'd love to see the little dears."

Under the low bushes near the edge of the woods they found Mama Quail sitting on her nest.

"Mama Quail, have you ever met Doris?" Daddy Quail asked, after greeting his mate with the friendly "Bob White!" "She is a great friend of the wood-folk so Squeedee says."

"I don't think I've ever met you before," chuckled Mama Quail, "but I've seen you a good many times before my little ones were hatched."

"Oh, dear! Then you're sitting on babies!" Doris exclaimed excitedly. "May I see them?"

In answer Mama Quail jumped off the nest, and twenty tiny heads popped up, and Doris looked into twenty hungry little mouths.

It looked so very funny she laughed.

"My goodness," she cried, "but you have a big family. How in the world id you ever have the patience to sit on so many eggs? You must be a brave little mother to take charge of so many at once."

"I never could have done it without my husband's help," laughed Mama Quail. "Haven't you noticed he doesn't dress nearly so caudily as most male birds? That's because he helps me hatch the eggs. Why, if he were as gay as Brother Robin, he would be spotted in no time. But I like his suit, don't you?"

"Of course you do," laughed Daddy Quail merrily. "Such a funny question to ask me in front of me. But I rather like my red dish-brown suit myself. Of course I wouldn't like it so well if it were not relieved by the black and yellow vest and my white collar. I've often wished I had a red cap like Woody Woodpecker's, but since I'm grown and have good sense I'm glad it's brown and black. Neither of us is much on dress; but we do love children."

Just then Doris' mother called her. Promising to return after lunch, she hurried home.

THAT TIRED FEELING

—By Brice Belden, M. D.—

PEOPLE who suffer from chronic weariness, a tendency to drowsiness, lack of "pep" and general disinclination to be active are usually suffering from unclean blood; that is to say, they are suffering from autointoxication.

It has been said that every such person is a bootlegger manufacturing intoxicants upon his premises, and that his drowsiness, bad breath and laziness give him away.

It is inconceivable that any one should wish to continue in a toxin state. The reason why a victim does not wipe out the "speak-easy" and "blind pig" upon his premises must be because he doesn't know how to do it.

In the first place, they must learn that they cannot have an unpolluted blood stream unless they eat moderately of the proper kinds of food.

Gluttony in itself is harmful enough, but when it means an excessive consumption of foods which are particularly liable to clog the body with poisonous products, that way lies sickness and the pale reaper. It is the protein group of foods which have to be used with circumspection, of immense nutrimental value, they none the less must be eaten moderately.

These poisons are very depressing, and many cases of neurasthenia, so-called, are really nothing but instances of the effects of these powerful fatigue poisons.

All hygienic measures must wait upon the regulation of the diet in these cases; they will avail little otherwise.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

A postoffice and police station have been established on Craig Island, the most northerly island in the world, 890 miles from the Pole.

TRAINING THE YOUNG

AN ARTICLE BY A NOTED EDUCATOR

By William A. McKeever

Widely Known Lecturer and Author and a National Authority on Juvenile Problems

RELATE it properly to the life of the child and work becomes as cultural as history or literature.

Now, let the schools and the teachers beware. The teaching of caste is out of date as well as before. Let the class room take the lead and explain to the growing generation as well as teach by class room exercise as to how the working man is slowly arising to a place of full social and spiritual membership in modern society.

The shortened day and the modern machine have taken the discredit and drudgery out of common work and made it consistent with health, culture and a long life of contentment.

But the schools have a very definite duty to perform before the masses will readily accept this new definition and dignity of labor.

To teach all children to work with their hands as a necessary means of physical, cultural and finally creative; that the work of the hand as well of the brain of man provides his best happiness and enables him to sustain himself on the earth easily against the cosmic forces of nature—this is a good introduction to dramatic poetry.

To teach the young the habit of industry and of industrial advancement on their own initiative methods and technique of some particular class of creative industry, to show them a way whereby their advancing years may be best daily with something worth going, something to entice the imagination and nourish the subjective spirit—this is a means of salvation of mankind on the earth.

Let us defend all children against their own folly, and idleness. Let us stand together against the later exploitation of the children of the poor as well as the rich. Let us bring common industry up to where it belongs—with professional, business and educational occupations.

Suffered Breakdown After Husband's Death

Was In a Serious Condition Until She Began Taking Wincarnis

"During my husband's illness I had practically worn myself out through work and worry, and so when he passed away I felt almost reached a state of collapse. I would feel so exhausted that it was an effort to get up and go to bed, and yet when night came I could get no sleep. I was fearfully nervous—the slightest thing would make me jump.

"I read one day about Wincarnis and decided to try it, and it certainly had the desired effect. I felt a little better—a wonderfully and by the time I had taken the first bottle my appetite had come back. I was much less nervous and began to get a good night. I have taken only a few bottles and now I am entirely well. My insomnia is gone and I really feel like a new woman."

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

Are you heading for comfort, financially in your old age?

The beginning of a new year is an ideal time to take this question up for very serious consideration.

Suppose we are just what happens to our people.

* * *

Let us start with one hundred average men starting out in life at the age of twenty-five.

* * *

Ten years later seven of them are well to do, sixty-two are doing moderately well, twenty-five haven't saved anything, seven are dependent.

* * *

At forty-five, of the eighty-six still living one is rich, ten are well to do, fifty-three are moderate means twenty-two are worth nothing, nine are dependent upon others.

* * *

At fifty-five, twenty-three are dead, one is rich, thirteen are well to do, forty are moderately comfortable, twenty-three are penniless, and eighteen of them are dependents.

* * *

At sixty-five, forty-two have passed on, and of those surviving only one is rich and seven are well to do, while no fewer than fifty have not enough income from property or investments to support them without working or receiving assistance from others. Of the fifty, twenty-two are worth nothing. And no fewer than thirty-eight are dependent upon others or upon charity of one kind or another.

* * *

At seventy-five, of the thirty-three still living only three are well off, thirty have not enough income to support them without working or receiving assistance. Of the thirty, sixteen are worth nothing and 60 per cent. have become dependents.

* * *

What is the showing made by our hundred men when the final account is made after their death?

Nine leave estates producing $50 a month or more, based on an income rate of 4 per cent. Twenty-seven leave enough to yield an average of $20 a month.

But sixty-four leave little or nothing—most of them nothing at all.

* * *

What happens to widows?

Of 180 widows only sixteen are able to live on the incomes left them.

Forty-two have to eke out their income by doing some kind of work.

And no fewer than forty-two become dependents.

These figures are taken from an extremely interesting folder just compiled by Joseph J. Devney as the result of the co-operation of a thousand bankers and life insurance men in all parts of the United States.

How can poverty in old age be guarded against?

Halsey, Stuart & Company, the investment bankers of New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, St. Louis, Milwaukee and Minneapolis, deal very helpfully with this subject in a new booklet "Safe Bonds for Investment."

WD-11 TUBE DOOMS BIG BATTERY

The WD-11 dry-cell vacuum tube has doomed the expensive and awkward storage battery to the discard.

Contrary to a general impression, the new dry cell tube is exactly as sensitive as the old four or six volt tube that drew about an ampliere from the expensive depths of the storage battery. In addition it has several advantages.

It can be used either as a detector or as an amplifier tube. Being extremely hard, the tubes will stand any amount of plate (B battery) voltage up to the point where the lead-in wires break down from electrolysis, which is a point the average amateur need not bother his head about.

NO DISTORTION.

The plate impedence is approximately 20,000 ohms. This is about the resistance of standard phone receivers, which means that a series connection of plate and phones results in high efficiency.

As the grid is very hard, it takes practically no grid current, as the grid is sustained negative.

For a normal signal strength no grid battery or potentiometer is necessary. When the signals are extremely strong, and when high plate voltages are used, practically distortionless amplification may be obtained by using a negative grid bias of from three to five volts.

The tube works well for detection using a grid leak of two meohms and a grid condenser of .00025 mfd.

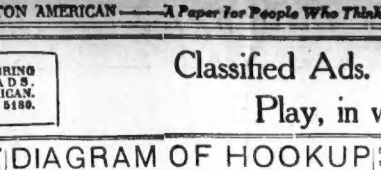
STILL NEWER TUBE.

A still newer tube, to be known as the UV-201-A, which uses one-fourth of the filament current of the present radiotrons has just been perfected for engineers. Its storage battery will last four times as long with this tube as with the old type.

The tube is quite similar in shape with no tube noises, and gives greater amplification, due to a greater filament and plate area, and has a greater electron emission.

The WD-11 tube cannot be used in the standard sockets that hold the old storage battery tube; but an adapter may be purchased which will convert the old socket into one taking the WD-11. The UV-201-A tube is interchangeable with the old storage battery tubes.

DIAGRAM OF HOOKUP FOR DRY CELL TUBES



SIMPLE BUT HIGHLY SENSITIVE

A simple but highly sensitive receiver using the new dry cell tubes for lighting the filaments and thus eliminating the expensive storage battery, is shown above. This set is also very selective. V is an ordinary variometer. C is an .0005 variable condenser. J-1 is a double circuit jack and J-2 is a single circuit jack for the phone plug. The tube requires two dry cells (1½ volts). If two are used, they should be connected in parallel (negative to negative and positive to positive). The B battery can be anything from 48 volts up.

SCENES IN NEW IBANEZ FILM GORGEOUS

In making of "The Enemies of Women," Vicente Blasco Ibanes' famous romance, Cosmopolitan Productions has not only embellished it with more natural scenic beauty than has ever been seen in a motion picture, but is also creating some of the most gorgeous interior "scenes" that have ever been filmed.

One of the most beautiful of these interior scenes shows the interior of the Monte Carlo home of Prince Lubimoff, played by Lionel Barrymore, who is featured in the production. It is here that Prince Lubimoff brings into being the strange cult that he calls "The Enemies of Women," and the resultant scene is one of the most interesting in the whole production.

This "set" reveals a balcony which looks out on the sea and is a replica of the Villa Maryland, Cap Feret, near Nice, which is one the most beautiful villa on the Cote d'Azur. It was in the victinity of the Villa Maryland that the most startling picturesque "exteriors" of the picture were filmed during the six weeks the company spent making scenes in France.

Jack Pickford, who has already been all records for transcontinental commuting, stuck another peg in the scoreboard of his travels when he left for Detroit to join his bride of a few months, Marilynn Miller, who is starring there in "Sally," the popular Ziegfeld musical show. After spending the holidays with Miss Miller he went to New York to negotiate for a new story and to confer with Hiram Abrams concerning the release of "Garrison's Finish," recently completed.

After a short stay, Jack will dash back to Detroit to accompany Marilynn to Chicago, where "Sally" opens for an extended run, January 7. Following the Chicago opening, it is hoped everything will be in readiness for the start of his new production.

Studio Notes

Another convert has been won to the cult of celluloid in Roger Lewis, magazine writer, former war correspondent and instructor of English at Harvard. Lewis has been engaged to act as adviser to Jack Pickford in the matter of choosing stories.

* * *

It has been decided to make a Universal attraction of "Trimmed in Scarlet," the William Hurlbut play, which was acted several years ago in New York by Maxine Elliott. Jack Conway will direct and a cast which will include Kathlyn Williams, David Torrence, Roy Stewart, Phillips Smalley and Lucille Rickson will portray it.

Gloria Swanson has been surrounded by a strong cast for her next Paramount picture, "Prodigal Daughters," a Sam Wood production. Ralph Graves will be the leading man and Vera Reynolds will play the part of a young pleasure-loving girl who is plunged into tragedy through her love of a good time. Theodore Roberts has the role of a successful American business man.

Richard Barthelmess and his supporting company have returned from Havana, where they went to film the exteriors of "The Bright Shawl," under the direction of John S. Robertson. The company has been in the Cuban republic for more than three weeks.

Sues for Heart Balm

Valuing at $2,500 an alleged refusal of Elias Berenger of Somerville to marry her as agreed, Miss Alice McDonald has filed suit in Middlesex County to recover that amount.

BOZO'S SUCCESS DUE ENTIRELY TO HIS LIPS

Question—Where is the most expressive pair of lips in Greater Boston?

Answer — On Thomas Snyder's face.

Meaning, in explanation, that Tommy "Bozo" Snyder, the silent pantomimist, whose much expressive mobile lips that without uttering one word of speech he can convey a whole gallery of expressions and continents merely with his features alone.

"Bozo," as he is known from coast to coast, is the leading comedian with "Follies of the Day," the musical revue at the Gayety Theatre.

Whether arrayed in evening dress or as a park policeman in one scene or flirting with a fair charms maid in another scene, or in whatever the stage situation, "Bozo" says never a word. But his meaning is clear and his comedy never fails to "get across."

About the best story told by "Bozo" is the time he was riding in the smoking compartment from New York to Boston. A traveling man in the next seat began conversation and talked along. "Bozo" listened agreeably. At the end of the run the traveling man remarked: "Glad to have talked with you; you are such a pleasant conversationalist that I—"

The traveling man paused a moment then ejaculated: "Say, come to think of it, I don't recall you having said anything at all. But you seemed to be expressing yourself somehow. How did you do it?"

"Bozo" smiled and spoke his first words: "That's a secret."

How Parents Spoil Their Children

Thousands of Ways—We Mention One

Copyright, 1923, Star Company

This editorial is written in response to the request of a reader. He asks us to point out the harm that parents do by giving conflicting orders to children.

Many thoughtless fathers and mothers bewilder their children and hinder their development in the way complained of.

In the system of laws which govern grown men the first essential is UNITY of law. If laws should conflict, no man would be expected to live or to develop properly under them.

The will and the instructions of the parents are the LAWS which govern children.

The child is unfortunate whose parents are whimsical. Still more unfortunate is the child whose father and mother disagree on important points—one saying "you shall do that," another "you shall not do that"—one ordering a certain thing, the other forbidding it.

The idea of education is first of all to develop what is IN the child, bringing out what is good in him with as little oppression and coercion as possible from without. The child should be controlled mainly by making him feel personally the uncomfortable results of a harmful action.

Nature corrects us grown children solely by making us suffer the consequences of our own deeds. Children should be corrected in the same way—not arbitrarily, not by threats, but through their reason, their sense of justice and their respect for inevitable consequences.

Above all the child should be made thoroughly to respect laws and rules. There should be no such thing as conflict between parents. A single order from a father contradicted by a mother is enough to destroy all respect for parental authority.

On this subject we hope to write very fully at a future time. We carry out our reader's request today in urging upon parents to be CONSISTENT by discussing and settling differences of opinion among themselves and never destroying the child's respect for authority by conflicting orders.

Railroads to Blame for Our Coal Shortage

We talked with our coal dealer yesterday. We told him that our coalbin was empty. He said that he could only send a ton of soft coal, for he had no hard coal in his yards. We told him that we had had success with the soft coal, the fire went out, it caked, it smoked up the house, it was difficult to make it live all night and was probably burning out the lining of the furnace. He said that he was sorry, but that he could not help it. We told him that there was a sick person in the house who must have the house warm. He said that he was sorry—that all he could give us was that miserable soft coal.

We asked him what he thought to be the trouble. He said he did not know; that it was as much a puzzling situation to him as it was to his customers. We asked him if he did not know that there was plenty of coal being mined, and he said that he knew that was true. We asked him why he could not get hard coal in such circumstances. He said that he could not tell. He declared that there was plenty of hard coal around, but that it was being held for exorbitant prices. He declared that he had received circulars offering hard coal for prices very much above that established by public authorities as a fair price. He said that he knew that hard coal was being shipped in large quantities to a foreign country. We asked him if he thought it was possible that there was a campaign going on to get New England used to soft coal for heating. He said that he should not be at all surprised. We asked him what he would guess to be the trouble. He said: "I know that the railroads are breaking down and cannot manage the deliveries and I think that it is possible that there is a conspiracy on to raise the price of hard coal and introduce soft coal."

These are the statements of a coal dealer who has been in the business a long time, and it is a big business. In the meantime everybody shivers and sucks his thumb and swears a little, groans a little and does nothing more. If the community has not energy enough and thoughtfulness enough to think out the remedy, we will point it out. THE REMEDY IS PUBLIC OWNERSHIP AND OPERATION OF THE RAILROADS.

We are in the same situation that we were during the war when the railroads were unable to bring the grain on the farms and in the grain elevators of the West to the ships which were waiting to bear it to the armies in France and Italy. We nearly lost the war by this breakdown of the railroads under private management. The government had to take the railroads and operate them in order to save the war.

The railroads under private management have been responsible for nine-tenths of the corruption to our public life. They have been responsible for three-quarters of the great private fortunes which threaten the stability of our democratic republic. They are today the greatest menace to our economic and political welfare. How long are we going to let them continue to be?

Cowards Not Wanted in the Navy

President Harding's Wise Punishment

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

By President Harding's orders, which the country will applaud, two midshipmen were dismissed from Annapolis and three "set back."

The action, punishment of hazing, was necessary. Hazing is cowardice. And it is cowardice made worse by the foolish conceit of men in a higher class.

They torture a young man ten to one. That very low form of cowardice is not needed in the American Navy.

Courage, generosity, pity for the weak, eagerness to defend those in trouble, are qualities needed in young Americans, called to defend their country.

A group of young men, indulging their vilest, meanest instincts, by tormenting another, absolutely helpless in the hands of a cowardly crowd is not a pleasant sight in an institution supposed to develop heroes. The President's stern punishment, inflicted despite much pleading by Congressmen and others, does him great credit.

REAL LOVE CAUSES NO CRIME

By Winifred Black

WELL, it's all over.

The doubt and the eating cancer of uneasy jealousy, the blinding fury—it's all over, and the woman who caused it is dead, and the man is dead, too—did the man's wife commit murder or hire it to be committed?

And if she did—how does she feel about it now that it is over and done with?

What a wild frenzy seems to sweep the human family like some great tidal wave in every once in a while!

From all over the country we get the news—a man suspected his wife and so he followed her and killed her, and now he must be tried and go to prison, and slave out his days in endless torment, if he is not forced to deliver his life at once—for what?

The fight love of a fight woman.

And he didn't gain even that by what he did.

"All for love and the world well lost."

Ah, yes, that's all very well—but is it really love. And how long do you keep it if it is?

Love, real love—love that has in its very web and woof the quality of sacrifice—this is the only thing on earth worth the trouble of living.

To gain and keep such love as that—who would not give years of even a short lifetime?

CAFETERIA FLIES ELECTROCUTED

BERKELEY, Cal., Jan. 4.—Capital punishment is being advocated at the University of California.

Not capital punishment for students or professors, but for the lowly flies that cluster about the raisin pie at Stephens Hall on the campus.

Wholesale electrocution rather than the swatting process has been installed in the cafeteria.

Wires stretched together on a 2 by 3 foot frame have been covered with a concoction of sugar and water. A mild electric current is then passed through the wires, and the flies, attracted by the sweets, meet death by electricity.

Why the Irish Fight

Editor Boston American:

I must take exception to an editorial in the Boston American under the caption: "Why do the Irish fight?" which insinuates that the Irish are fighting because they enjoy it, and "it seems that no one is going to take it away from them." "Homes are burned, trains derailed and men killed in their houses, and the end seems far off." This seems to be an enumeration of the doings of the Irish Republicans. Nothing is said of the atrocious murder of Harry Boland and the cold-blooded murders of prisoners of war, etc., by the so-called Free Staters.

History nowhere and at no time can parallel the gallant and sustained fight the Irish are making for justice and liberty against almost impossible odds and with the unshaken determination to be free and confident of ultimate victory. The Irish are now confronted with their ancient enemy in the guise of the so-called Irish Free State, which has oppressed them for nearly 800 years; the same enemy which oppressed the American colonies and which Washington defeated. Washington and his followers would not accept a mockery of freedom. Neither do the Irish. This is why the Irish fight.

JEREMIAH CARROLL.

Thanks for Assistance

Editor Boston American:

May we thank you for the assistance rendered the residents of Grove street, in giving publicity to the conditions prevailing because of the poor water service in this section for a number of years. With pleasure, we wish to inform you that water mains are being laid and feel that your assistance was no small item in the starting of work on a service which was badly needed.

CLEAR LAKE OF LILY PADS

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Jan. 4.—Mirror Lake is to be cleared of the tons of lily pads floating on its surface. The City Commission has purchased 15,000 gallons of kerosene with which to do the work.

Mirror Lake is one of the prettiest bodies of water in South Florida, but floating lily pads gained a foothold in it a few years ago and spoiled it for pleasure craft. Numerous ways have been suggested for ridding the lake of this nuisance. The city recently voted $4,000 for this purpose. About one-third of it was expended in various experiments, when it was discovered that kerosene is fatal to lily pads when freed on the surface of the water.

SEEN AND HEARD

MAYOR CURLEY complimented his social secretary, STANDISH WILLCOX, the other day, on the very pretty tie he was carrying around his neck. He asked if the "Sec." had any more. "Sure," said STANDISH, "one dozen more just like this that I am going to keep, and another dozen that will surely be hard to give away."

PUBLIC WORKS COMMISSIONER "JOE" ROURKE isn't worrying about snowstorms, sleet or rain. He is at present on a vacation in Bermuda. He was recently heard from, saying that the weather and other things were in a state of normalcy.

A new kind of street-vendor has made his appearance in Boston. He was seen on Washington street recently, offering for sale a litter of bulldog pups. "Bruno wants a home. Who'll take poor little Bruno home?" is his selling appeal.

Regardless of her recent defeat for a seat in the City Council MISS FLORENCE H. LUSCOMB may be seen at her accustomed place in the gallery of the City Council chamber at City Hall on meeting day. COUNCILLOR JAMES A. (JERRY) WATSON laughingly refers to her as "the watch lady of the Council."

LIEUTENANT - GOVERNOR ALVAN T. FULLER is participating in the "back-to-the-farm" movement. Not only is he exhibiting prize-winning Single Comb Rhode Island Reds at the Boston poultry show, but also is sending his superintendent from Little Boar's Head, N. H., this month to England to make choices of blooded cattle for a stock farm.

A survey among working men of Boston by a local advertising agency has revealed the fact that men under thirty-five, as a general rule, wear overalls when engaged in work that calls for protection against dirt. Men over thirty-five are less careful.

ALBION ROWE'S house in Gorham, Me., was recently moved a mile and a half, the event attracting country-wide attention. But at Kittery, Me. (first named Boston), the Sparhawk Mansion timbers were first cut in the Pine Tree State, then sent to England, where the house was fashioned, and thence back to America as SIR WILLIAM PEPPERRELL'S wedding gift to his daughter. Thus the mansion actually twice crossed the Atlantic.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON RADIO FROM STARS

By Garrett P. Serviss

INHABITANTS of a planet revolving around a star (called "the sun"), which itself is in rapid motion, we are in the dilemma of passengers upon a vessel which never touches land. Unfathomable space surrounds us and we cannot get away from our ever-voyaging earth-ship, our celestial "Flying Dutchman," doomed never to reach port. And we cannot exercise the least control or influence over the direction or the circumstances of this endless cruise. The captain we never see; the crew are bodiless forces.

When we have exhausted, for the time being, the interest afforded by our occupations and amusements on the deck and in the cabins of our circling barque—which, in glorious moments, appears as hopeless a prison as a banned slaver—the only recourse for those whose minds are still undaunted is to lean upon the railings and gaze thoughtfully across the illimitable deep, where, afar off, thousands of other star-like sails are visible, all equally wanderers.

We cannot launch boats to visit them, however calm the ocean of space may seem to lie. Nevertheless we have an intercourse with them which, though not yet in all respects comprehensible, involves the greatest and most absorbing exercise of the human intellect.

The stars are in radio communication with us.

That is a pregnant fact; a stupendous thought. Light and its attendant radiations are but forms of "radio" energy. All are electro-magnetic waves. (The definition may have to be altered, but the underlying fact will remain.) Beyond the point where the waves have lengthened until their visual impression has faded, through red and infra-red, to invisibility, the unbroken chain of vibratory energy continues, passing into the still longer waves that are used in radio-telephone communication.

Nature furnished man with the means of receiving impressions from those of these waves whose length, or frequency of vibration, is suitable to affect the nerves of vision. Man, by utilising a different gift—his wonderful intelligence—has furnished himself with the means of receiving impressions from another part of the chain of waves, where their length, or frequency, is not suitable to affect any of his senses directly. By ingenious transformations he has made them convey sounds, which they pick up from his lips and his musical instruments and carry to the ears of his fellow-voyagers all over this slave-ship of the infinite, from those gyves he half feels that he may yet free himself.

Whatever dreams we may entertain of communicating intelligence from stars to world must have for their basis some form of radiant energy. That being so, there is something almost startling in the thought that already we possess some of the desired means of communication, though in a form not yet developed beyond the limits fixed by nature without regard to our ever-growing wishes and necessities.

THREE-MINUTE JOURNEYS

By TEMPLE MANNING

WHERE PILGRIMS CRAWL ON THEIR KNEES FOR STRENGTH

IN 1255, at the Chateau of Kermartin, Brittany, was born St. Ives, whose name and tomb are reverenced by many in the most picturesque and strangest fashion.

St. Ives was an ecclesiastical lawyer. It was for this reason he was made the patron saint of lawyers. This good man was also the devoted friend of the poor and needy. His name has been many times blessed for his great kindness and generosity to those in poverty.

At Treguier, in Brittany, his skull is kept in a golden shrine, but his tomb is outside of the church at Minihy, a neighboring village.

Brittany is famed for her religious festivals. This province has kept alive all of her traditions and customs since the dawn of Christianity. They have come down to the present day with little change.

To the traveler, there could be no more delightful time to visit Brittany than when the festival, known as "Pardons," takes place at Minihy.

Then the town is crowded. The streets are filled with people from far and near, who are making a pilgrimage to the tomb of St. Ives Heloury.

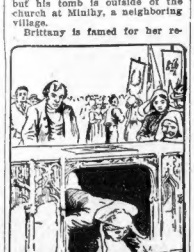
They all go to the churchyard where this simple tomb without an inscription is the object of their pilgrimage.

Here they wait in line—rich and poor, old and young, aristocrats and peasants — each with some hope in his or her heart, firmly believing it will be realized on this day of "Pardons."

They believe that if they crawl through the arch of this tomb on their hands and knees they will gain strength from the contact with the ground where the saint lies buried.

Through the arch they go—the picturesque peasants, women in their white flowing caps, men in the jaunty jackets. Smart people from the cities, and swaggering soldiers brush against a fisherman fresh from the sea or a smug provincial merchant.

They arise from the earth with mud on their faces, but with the light of hope in their eyes and comfort and inspiration in their souls.



Through the Arch They Go.
